DIRECTED RESEARCH

A Directed Research project may be undertaken by a student as an elective, pursuant to the following regulations:

1. Students must be supervised by a full-time faculty member.
2. The subject matter may be determined by the student and the supervising faculty member. A student may receive directed research credit for Law Review comments, Advanced Moot Court problems or Moot Court honors' briefs. Students shall not be paid for their Directed Research work.
3. The supervising faculty member and student shall meet regularly throughout the semester to review the student's progress, and the student shall submit for the faculty member's evaluation a substantial written product evidencing work completed over the semester.
4. Students may take only one Directed Research per semester and only two during the student's law school career. In the event the Directed Research is for the purpose of supplementing, expanding or revising work done for a course, the student shall receive only one unit of credit.
5. Directed Research may be taken only on a credit/credit-unsatisfactory/no credit basis. (See non-letter graded course limitation in Academic Policies).
