International Externship Program Placement Agreement ........................................................38
Congratulations on being accepted into the international summer externship program. This guide intends to provide a comprehensive overview of the policies of the program and it includes other information that may prove useful for your travels abroad. In your journey if you come across information that would benefit USF students in the future, please let us know at lawsummerabroad@usfca.edu. Best wishes for a meaningful and enjoyable summer!

Section 1: Program Requirements

International summer externships allow students to learn about the law and legal institutions of other countries and apply the skills they have learned in law school. The externship program is five weeks plus orientation and it begins with a week of instruction in-country from English-speaking law professors and lawyers on the legal system of the country, including trips to legal and cultural institutions. Students may stay longer than five weeks at their placement if requested. International externships are managed by a USF Faculty Director in coordination with an On-Site Director.

To earn academic units, you are required to participate in and complete the following:

Spring Training
During spring semester, you are required to attend a 1 hour training session that will cover time entry, research skills overseas, and professionalism in an international workplace environment. See Exhibit A for handouts that were provided during Spring Training.

Orientation
You are required to attend lectures by foreign professors on the local legal system in addition to participation in cultural events and visits to legal related institutions (e.g. visits to prominent legal officials, courts, important landmarks, history and museums.) In most cases, the required orientation welcome dinner will take place the evening before the start of orientation.

Externship Agreement and Evaluation
A minimum of five weeks at your placement is required. You will meet with your USF Director and your supervising attorney to review and complete the International Externship Program Placement Agreement and to review the Final Evaluation of Law Student Extern form, which is required for satisfactory completion of externships. The supervising attorney will complete the evaluation at the end of the externship, review it with you, and email it to the USF Director.
Externship Paper
An externship paper is not required. You may choose to write a paper associated with your externship to fulfill the Upper Level Research & Writing Requirement with the approval of your USF Director who will supervise the paper. The paper will be due by the end of the Fall Semester.

Student Reflection
• Timesheets: You are expected to enter your time on a daily basis and to email your timesheet each week to your USF Director, your supervising attorney and the Externship Coordinator (lawsummerabroad@usfca.edu). For credit, timesheets must be signed by your supervisor and submitted to your USF Director during the program or at the latest by August 19, 2016. Because we want to encourage opportunities for direct engagement with your supervising attorney, electronic signatures will not be accepted.

• Weekly Report: In addition, you are required to email a weekly reflection to your USF Director and the Externship Coordinator by Tuesday of the following week. The reflection must be at least 300 words and it must include your name and the week number.

  • Week 1: Identify and describe with specificity, your primary goals for this externship. Consider how you would like to grow and/or develop as a lawyer over the course of the summer. Some questions to think about: What would you like to find out about this type of work? What skills or experiences would you like exposure to? What skills are you lacking in or need to improve? Please discuss these goals with your Supervisor.

  • Week 2: Identify lessons learned regarding the law, legal institutions and legal profession of the country. Discuss engagement with your supervisor and/or other attorneys with regard to opportunities, assignments, instruction and feedback, and identify successes or challenges with regard to integration into the culture of the country and the placement.

  • Week 3: Interview someone at your placement. Select someone to interview at your placement; it does not need to be your supervising attorney, but it should be someone you admire at your placement. Talk with them about their legal career, how they got where they are (their path), and where they expect their path to take them. Ask them for their insights into good lawyering and bad lawyering. You are encouraged to seek advice from them for you as you prepare to embark on your legal career.

  • Week 4: Identify lessons learned regarding the law, legal institutions and legal profession of the country; discuss engagement with your supervisor and/or other attorneys with regard to opportunities, assignments, instruction and feedback; and identify successes or challenges with regard to integration into the culture of the country and the placement.
• Week 5: Identify what you wish you knew before you started your externship; and identify how your externship has impacted your plans for the kind of work you might do after law school. In what ways will your experiences in this placement be transferable to other settings?

• Week 6+: If you stay longer than five weeks, you must continue to submit a weekly timesheet and weekly reflection. For week 6 and beyond, identify lessons learned regarding the law, legal institutions and legal profession of the country; discuss engagement with your supervisor and/or other attorneys with regard to opportunities, assignments, instruction and feedback; and identify successes or challenges with regard to integration into the culture of the country and the placement.

You are encouraged to stay in touch with your USF Director throughout the duration of the program for assistance with legal and professional matters relating to the externship.

Wrap Up Session
On return to San Francisco during the second or third week of the fall semester, please plan to participate in a wrap up session to discuss your legal experience and suggestions for improvement in the program.

Section 2: Program Policies and Information

Academic Requirements
Students must have completed 28 law credits at the USF School of Law and must be in good academic standing.

Behavioral Contract
Students are required to sign a Behavioral Contract, which states that at all times during the Program, students must conform with the Mission of the University, the standards set forth in the Fogcutter Student Handbook, all rules then in effect as contained in Program literature and as stated by Program personnel, and all rules established by the Program site. The University considers some offenses to be serious including, but not limited to the following:

- Illegal drug use
- Use of abusive language
- Failure to inform appropriate personnel regarding travel plans
- Alcohol use that impairs judgment and/or leads to improper social behavior
- Disruptive behavior and/or noise in residences, hotels, transportation or campus
- Disregard for local laws and mores
- Disruption or obstruction of teaching
- Failure to attend classes or other Program activities regularly (without an excused absence or permission)

Failure to comply with any part of this behavior contract may result in disciplinary action, including immediate expulsion from the Program; total forfeiture of all fees and monies paid to the University of San Francisco; loss of all course/academic credit in progress; and permanent disqualification from all future University of San Francisco Study Abroad or international programs. If conduct is determined detrimental and participation in the program is terminated, costs associated with leaving the program early is the responsibility of the student.

Classroom Materials
Classroom materials for certain courses are duplicated and distributed in advance or on-site if applicable.

Compensation
Due to visa requirements, students are not compensated.

Dating
Institutions of higher education are obliged by law to promote an educational environment that is free from unlawful gender or sexual harassment including at externship opportunities that the Law School supports or makes available to its students.

The University does not have the role of the employer with regard to those attorneys and other professionals who work at externship sites. The University thus has considered other ways to assure a professional experience for students at externships sites, avoiding the potential problems that can arise from unnecessarily close personal relationships between students on the one hand, and the attorneys and other professionals at the externship sites on the other hand.

The University requests that students agree in advance to not participate in close personal relationships with persons at the externship sites, during the time period of working there. Close personal relationships include dating, sexual and similar close personal relationships, whether or not consensually undertaken. Simple socializing that is common in professional offices is not of course in any way to be discouraged.

Tips from Students

- Buy your tickets early to secure a lower price. Tickets are higher on the weekend and cheapest on Tuesday and Wednesday. Roundtrip tickets are less expensive than one-way.
- Arrive during the day if possible to make introduction into the country easier.
- To avoid problems accessing your funds, notify your bank ahead of time of your travel plans.
- Check with your bank, but in some cases lower exchange rates are available at an ATM. Currency requirements outside of major cities may be different.
- Contact your cell phone carrier regarding international plans or purchase an inexpensive cell phone in country. Be careful of expensive roaming charges.
- Consider subleasing your apartment while you travel.
- Secure housing abroad before your leave the U.S.
- Renting a bike may be a good form of transportation.
- Not all websites are available overseas. Download your music before your travel.
- Avoid leaving items on the window sill of an open window.
- Be aware of visa requirements if you travel to other countries.
- Take a mini first aid kit, sunblock and bug spray.
- Invite your supervisor out to lunch.
- Be proactive about finding work. Don’t be afraid to ask for work.
- Leave your externship with a written recommendation from your supervisor. It may be difficult to get one when you return.

Units
All externships earn 4 non-classroom units. For students who entered law school in Fall 2011 or later, 19 non-classroom units may apply towards a JD degree (for enrollment prior to Fall 2011, 21 non-classroom units may be applied.) Students may enroll in more than 19 non-classroom units, but only 19 will apply to the JD degree.

Drop or Withdrawal
Students who wish to drop from the international externship program must do so by May 1, 2017 in order to receive a 100% tuition and fee refund. The $350 tuition deposit is non-refundable.

Students who withdraw from the program after May 1st are not eligible for a tuition or fee refund. Additionally, a neutral grade of “W” will be entered on the transcript. Requests to withdraw from the program must be sent from the student's USF email address to lawsummerabroad@usfca.edu and must be sent on or before the last day of the program (i.e., China and Mexico – July 14, 2017; Czech Republic and Europe IP - July 21, 2017; Vietnam – July 28).

Timekeeping and Billing Practices

Introduction

One important skill often overlooked in a law school education is how to prepare an acceptable timesheet. Even after law school, many new attorneys acquire this skill only after being approached by a supervisor to discuss an insufficient or inadequate draft billing statement. Being able to skillfully present your performance on paper to a client, attorney supervisor, or to a judge, has a direct impact on your relationship to that person. Can you describe your work in a way that the client will not mind paying that high bill, month after month, on the same matter? If you are working on a contingency or statutory fee case, will your billing statements convince a judge that you deserve your attorney fees? Corporations, government offices, and nonprofits, which do not have billable-hours requirements, rely on accurate time reports to prepare their management reports, build budgets, and justify additional funds and personnel. Consider the following before you submit your timesheet—is it defensible?

Students enrolled in externships must submit timesheets to demonstrate that they are completing the required fieldwork hours. Beyond this purpose, we will use these timesheets as opportunities for you to practice your skills in preparing high-quality billing statements. In addition, your timesheets will show your attorney supervisor or judge what you have been working on, how long that took, and if you understood the “big picture” of the assignment in relation to the entire case or matter.

I have enclosed some guidelines below to help you prepare your timesheets. For the sake of simplicity, they are described with a law firm client in mind; however, these guidelines should apply well to work performed for a nonprofit, district attorney or public defender office, other government agency, or a court. Time entry descriptions are discussed herein; model timesheets and examples of “do’s and do not’s” are attached at the end.

General Guidelines re Accounting for Time

1) On your timesheet, please account for the entire time you are in the office (except for non-working lunch periods), not just when you are working on specific matters. Include the “dead” time when you are waiting for the next assignment, or attending programs/networking luncheons, or completing administrative tasks for your office. Time spent on administrative tasks should not be significant.

2) Time spent attending the Orientation or a meeting with me, or completing weekly timesheets, does not count toward fieldwork hours.

3) Time spent meeting with your attorney supervisor in preparing your response to Practice Reflections may count toward fieldwork hours.

1 These guidelines are a modification of those provided by Hanson Bridgett LLP.
 Submission and Format of Timesheets

All entries on timesheets must be typed, as handwritten timesheets will not be accepted. Timesheets must be submitted on a weekly basis, by the Wednesday following each work week. (See Syllabus and TWEN calendar for deadlines.) Students who regularly submit timesheets late risk receiving a CR- Unsatisfactory grade.

Timesheets containing insufficient descriptions may be returned to the student and the hours will not be counted until revised timesheets are submitted and approved. This is not to make your life unnecessarily difficult, but to instill a skill that you are unlikely to receive training for before practicing law. You probably will change jobs several times after school, and even though instruction is not always provided, this is one skill that many employers will assume you know how to do instinctively. Below are some pointers to help you prepare acceptable timesheets now and after school.

What is the Purpose of a Timesheet?

A timesheet is not necessarily a simple chronology of what you did during the day. It is a draft bill to a client for services rendered. When you record your timesheet entry for the work you are performing, think about your client and what the client views as important. Consider how the work you are doing relates to the client’s case or project as a whole. Try to characterize what you are doing in a manner that suggests its importance to the client's case or transaction in a manner that the client will recognize and appreciate. Your goal is to characterize your time to motivate the client to be grateful for the work you are doing and want to pay the bill.

Think Like Your Client

What work on the case will your client want to pay for? What things will the client not want to pay for? In litigation, clients expect to pay for court appearances, the taking and defending of depositions, preparing motions, meeting with witnesses, conducting investigation and analyzing the claims on either side. Clients usually like to pay for settlement negotiations because they expect most cases to settle. Clients do not mind paying for meetings and conferences with themselves, particularly when you are obtaining information to represent them. In transactional matters, clients expect to pay for consultation on deal points, advice on the law and negotiations; they sometimes do not want to pay for travel time.

Clients rarely want to pay for “staff conferences,” “office meetings,” “attorney meetings,” telephone conferences, travel time and situations where more than one attorney or paralegal is attending and is doing the same thing. All clients fear that attorneys take too long, perform unnecessary tasks, and engage in redundancies and duplication of effort. Most clients believe that most attorneys have a tendency to wander from the main point to trivial technicalities, which are costly but make no difference on the outcome of the case or transaction. Most clients don’t appreciate attorneys or paralegals drafting, redrafting, reviewing and revising, analyzing, further revising and finalizing. If a client wants to write a business letter, the client simply writes a business letter and signs it. That client will not want to pay his/her attorney to “draft correspondence, review and revise letter, make further revisions, approve and execute letter,” particularly when the subject seems to the client to be simple and direct. Clients expect “drafting” and revisions only when an important agreement is needed that is expected to go through more than one draft because of the input of others.
Understand Your Client’s Specific Billing Requirements

Many clients have developed specific requirements as to format and content of billing entries. For example, some institutional clients require separate attribution of time for each task within a day. Before you commence time entries, confirm with the billing attorney whether the client has any particular “do’s” or “don’ts” and follow them. This memo will address suggestions for a client with no specific requirements but who is attentive and concerned about the tasks to be accomplished and the cost of legal services.

Tips on Preparing a Timesheet

1. Understand the Big Picture. Describe what you do without trivializing the task. Try to relate the task on today’s timesheet with the flow of work performed yesterday and last week as well as what can be expected tomorrow and next week. Relate what you do to the big picture of why the client hired you, i.e., tie what you do to a part of the assignment which the client will want to pay you for.

New attorneys in particular should remember that they are working for a client, not just for the attorney who gave the immediate assignment. Thus, “Obtain documents for attorney” is not a good entry; better to say, “Obtain client documents for use in discovery” or “Review and summarize documents produced by opposing counsel for evaluation of claim [x].”

2. Choose words that suggest active participation and not observation. Try to use active and powerful words rather than passive ones. For example, “court appearance for hearing on motion for summary judgment” sounds more important and positive than “attend summary judgment hearing.” The latter makes you sound like a spectator rather than an advocate for your client’s case.

If the court or deposition is some distance from the office, it is better to say “Court appearance for hearing on motion to compel in San Jose” as opposed to “Travel to San Jose. Attend court hearing. Return to office.” If you travel to opposing counsel’s office to negotiate an agreement, say: “Meet with seller’s counsel in Palo Alto to negotiate asset purchase agreement.” The point is not to emphasize the travel; rather, emphasize the important task for which the travel was necessary.

In business, it is more powerful to “Meet with seller and counsel to negotiate terms of option” than to “Discuss option with L. Brown and S. Jones.”

3. Clients are not big fans of paying for staff/lawyer meetings or conference calls. Try to keep to a minimum including entries such as “staff conference,” “office conference,” “attorney meeting” or “conference with Partner X” to describe office conferences. Rather, you should focus on the subject of the conference and characterize what you did as it relates to the task at hand. For example, “Analyze bankruptcy implications of settlement agreement” is better than “staff conference regarding bankruptcy questions.”

Note: As law students, you are encouraged to observe as many courtroom or transaction experiences as possible, so some of your timesheet entries necessarily will include descriptions of passive activities.
Further examples of how to better characterize conference calls or meetings:

Don’t say “Telephone conference with [Client/Witness].” Rather say “Conference with [Client/Witness] regarding preparation for his deposition.” The point is to emphasize what the communication is about, which is presumably helpful and important to the client, not your ability to use the telephone.

If the meeting is in person, always say “Meeting with [Client/Witness] to prepare for his deposition.” If the meeting is outside our office, state where it is. If a deposition is in the office of opposing counsel, say that as opposed to giving other attorneys free publicity by naming the office. A “meeting” (in person) is usually more significant than a “conference” (verbal exchange, usually on the phone) because clients expect things to happen at meetings. Give them appropriate significance in your time entries.

4. Do not use the names of opposing counsel. Characterize outside counsel as counsel for co-defendant bank, opposing counsel, plaintiff’s counsel, defendant’s/defense counsel or some other generic description. Rarely does your client know the other attorneys outside the firm, and there is no need for the client to become familiar with them. As to other attorneys in our firm, it is usually better to say “Consult with tax counsel” or “Analyze issues with employment counsel” rather than naming names. Some clients, however, know the other firm attorneys well and expect them to be involved on the assignment. You should be guided by how familiar the client is with its other attorneys or paralegals in the firm and whether the client expects others to work on the matter.

5. It is appropriate to name witnesses and your client by name. Your client likes to be called by name, and be sure the name is spelled correctly. Use “Mr. Anderson” as opposed to “Anderson” or “Steve.”

(NOTE: Keep this guideline in mind for when you practice law. Right now, I do not and should not need to know your client names, so please refer them as “the Client”, “Defense Witness”, “Economics Consultant”, etc.)

6. Avoid abbreviations, use of initials for names and the “want ad” style of recording entries. For example, use “Meet with [Client] to review deal points and develop negotiating strategy” not “Client conf. T. Smith re: agreement.” If more than one client or participant has the same last name, use the full first names, e.g., “Meet with Raymond and Sarah Smith to analyze lease proposal.”

Your Bill Will Be Read Carefully

Many attorneys make the mistake of thinking of timesheet entries and bills as an unpleasant but necessary chore in the practice of law. True, but think differently. Think of the bill as your single most important act of client relations and business promotion. Many clients who do not find the time to read the opinion letters, contracts or motions you prepare for them, do carefully read every bill you send. The bill is, therefore, one of your most important and regular communications with the client. As such, it can greatly influence the client’s impression of you and your office.

A sloppy, erroneous or cryptic bill can go a long way to undermine the confidence a client develops from excellent work and prompt service. The promptly returned phone call and great result in negotiation is soon forgotten; the bill arrives in the cold gray of dawn, long after the work it represents is performed. Inevitably, it will be more than the client expects, even though the amount is well justified. Your mission is to depict what was done in a confident and convincing manner so as to persuade the client that the work was well justified, contributed to the client’s welfare and should be promptly rewarded with payment.
The wording should be clear, concise and concrete, suggesting the importance of what was done and relating each entry to the overall goal of the representation. The client wants to believe that what we are doing is somehow related to why the client hired us and is consistent with the client’s business or litigation objectives. The billing attorney must often edit the wording of entries so that they flow together as a strong message in support of payment. The objective of good time entries is to minimize or eliminate the need for such editing.

Present a Dignified Bill

Abraham Lincoln once said that “a lawyer’s time is his stock in trade.” He understood that a good lawyer doing good work should not be ashamed to bill for it. You try to give your clients excellent service and a fine work product, and you should not be shy or defensive about charging the clients appropriately for the services provided. Do so, however, in a manner that presents the bill in a dignified and professional form. This does not happen naturally; it takes work.

Think Before You Enter Time. Do It Daily.

Part of being a good lawyer is taking the time and thought to express daily time entries in a professional and persuasive manner. Associates will win high marks from partners with time entries which do not require editing before sending the bill. Billing attorneys will gain respect from their clients for demonstrating the value of the work they perform in the statement seeking payment. If the client reads nothing else you send him, he will read your bill. Make sure it starts with good entries, entered daily. All attorneys should avoid postponing completion of timesheets in order to avoid losing time or minimizing time actually spent. The longer the lag in completing the timesheet, the greater the risk of forgetting what was done and how it benefited the client. Try to submit your entries within one or two days of the work being performed, and be sure the client is billed promptly so that he or she remembers the work for which the bill is sent. Remember to send the client the work product, if the work should be sent, before the bill is sent for that work.

Advice Memo: What You Need to Know Before Your Externship Begins

To: Student Extern
From: Your Attorney Supervisor-to-Be
Date: Today and Every Day
Re: What You Need to Know Before Your Externship Begins

As the person you will work most closely with, I want to share a few things you should know, and a few things you should do, to prepare for your externship experience. They are as follows:

Workplace Etiquette

- Dress for success. Think professional, not Juicy Couture. If I think you should dress more casually, I’ll let you know. And if I suggest “business casual” on certain days, that does not mean flip flops, tank tops, t-shirts or shorts.

- Introduce yourself to the support staff and show each of them the same respect you would show to any lawyer in the office, including the boss. Talk to each of our co-workers the same way you talk to me. The person at the front desk fielding calls and the person in the copy room are very important. If you show a lack of respect to a staff member, believe me, I will hear about it, and you will feel the repercussions.

- Even if I start behaving more casually, that doesn’t mean you should. Don’t call me “dude” or tell me the details of your wild weekend. I may like you, but this is still a professional relationship. When you email anyone concerning the work we do, use their title unless you’ve specifically been invited to use a first name. Consider the experience a semester/summer long job interview.

Workplace Attitude

- Demonstrate your maturity. The intern with poise and confidence inspires confidence in me (even if you have to fake it until the self-assurance actually kicks in). When I talk with you about something you are working on, be prepared to articulate your reasoning. If you believe you understand the law correctly, be firm in your convictions.

- Take initiative and demonstrate self-reliance. Ask clarifying questions when I give you an assignment. Make sure you understand exactly what I want before you begin. Ask me to recommend secondary sources you should consult to get an overview of the topic, and/or ask if I could provide you with a sample or a template for the document I’m asking you to produce.

- Try to figure out something by yourself before asking me for help. That said, don’t spin your wheels for too long before letting me know you are stuck. Your time (and mine) is valuable, so don’t waste it.

- Show up on time and turn in your work by the deadline. Make sure I know your schedule and how to reach you when you’re not at the office. If I forget to ask you for your work when it’s due, you should come to me. Never leave tasks unfinished, especially if you know you will not return the next day.

- If you plan to change your weekly hours in the office (i.e., taking Spring Break week or a long July 4th weekend), let me know well in advance so I don’t give you an assignment that I expect to be completed during that time.

1 This advice memo is adapted from one generously provided by Professor Susan Rutberg of Golden Gate University.
When you are finished with a project, seek me out and ask for another. Make sure you ask me for feedback on the one you just completed. While I’ll try to remember to do this on my own, sometimes there’ll be too much on my plate and I’ll be tempted to brush this aside. Again, take the initiative—drop by my office or email me to set up a specific time to discuss your work product.

Brush Up Before You Show Up

- Review the applicable area of the law and/or procedural rules before you begin your externship. For example, if you’re working at an appellate office, review the standards of appellate review and get a copy of the California Style Manual to make sure you know proper citation form. (Ask me if the office has a training manual for students or new lawyers that you could get a head start on. I’ll probably be impressed with your initiative.)

- Read about my agency/law firm so you have a basic idea of what we do and how we work. “Google” me on the web or read about a few cases I/we have handled.

- Review your notes from your LRW class. Research and writing are the most important skills an extern can have, so I expect you to know how to plan a research strategy and draft a memo.

Keys to Effective Research and Writing

- Plan your research strategy:
  - What are the relevant facts? (A law school assignment presents you with fixed facts. Now you must figure out the facts and learn as much about them before beginning your research so your application of law to fact will be correct.)
  - What is the applicable law?
    - Use books (check indexes and tables of contents) and consider free internet sources as well as Lexis and Westlaw.
    - Begin with secondary authorities (encyclopedias, treatises, practice books).
    - Look for primary authority after you have a general understanding.
    - If statutes apply, get an overview. Reading only one section is too narrow.
    - Note the weight of authority: are cases from the highest court? Why not?
    - Read, take notes, and think before you print.
    - Update continually—use both Shepards and Keycite as a cross-check.
    - Keep a research log and copies of key statues and cases.

- Plan your writing strategy:
  - Who will read your memo? When is it due? Is there a page limit?
  - Can you look at samples?
  - What legal standard applies?
  - Assume your busy reader will be interrupted. Be clear and concise and include signposts to make it easy for the reader to get back into the memo.
  - Proofread! Proofread! Proofread!

Assignment Clarification “Cheat Sheet”

Understanding what is expected of you when you receive an assignment at your externship is essential to producing quality work product. Use this checklist as appropriate to make sure you have answers to all the relevant questions for the particular task you are being assigned. This will help minimize the number of times you approach your supervisor to ask questions to clarify the assignment.

___When do you need this? or How long do I have to work on this? or How long should I spend on this project?

___Are you available if I have questions or need to check in? Can I email you with questions?

___Do you have any suggestions about the best place to start my research? or I was thinking of starting with the treatises [or Westlaw] [or the Rutter Guide]; would you recommend anything else?

___Are you interested in federal [or state or 9th Circuit] law only, or should I broaden my search?

___Are there any samples of this type of [motion/brief/pleading/memo] I can look at? Where can I find them?

___Along with my memo, do you want me to turn in copies of the cases or other research materials I used? Or perhaps only the cases I thought were relevant? [Even if the answer is “no,” save them in case your supervisor asks for them later. Thus, I recommend that you email the cases/material to your email account rather than printing hard copies directly from Lexis/Westlaw, which will allow you to easily retrieve them at a later time.]

___Are there any documents from the case file that I can look at to familiarize myself with the case more generally? or Is there anyone else in the office that you think I should talk to about this assignment?

___Who is my audience? or Is there anyone other than you who will read what I give you?

___In what ways are you planning to use this information? A letter to the client? A contract? A pleading?

And the most important one:

___OK, just to make sure I understand, you want me to… (sum up assignment).

Basics of Attorney-Client Privilege and Work-Product Doctrine

Attorney-Client Privilege

1. To what does the privilege apply?
   - Communications relating to legal advice between client and attorney or attorney's agent.
   - Communications made in anticipation of litigation, and to legal advice when no litigation is threatened.

2. To what does it not apply?
   - Advice of a business or personal nature.
   - Communications made in the presence of a third party (Evid. Code sec. 952).

3. Who holds the privilege? The client.

4. Who can waive the privilege? The client.

5. How can the privilege be lost?
   - If the client implies by her actions that she intends to waive the privilege, for example, by allowing a third party to be present.
   - If document containing these atty-cl communications is advertently disclosed.

Work-Product Doctrine

1. What is a work product?
   - Documents prepared in anticipation of litigation or in preparation for trial—and in legal, nonlitigation matters.
   - “A writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories is not discoverable under any circumstances.” [CCP sec. 2018.030(a)]
   - Includes “work product” of attorney’s employees or agents

2. What is the work-product doctrine?
   - Protects the “work product” from being discoverable.
   - Attorney’s impressions, conclusions, and opinions absolutely protected. Exception: malpractice actions.
   - Other “work product” has qualified protection—may be obtained only “if the court determines that denial of discovery will unfairly prejudice the party seeking discovery in preparing that party’s claim or defense or will result in an injustice.” [CCP sec. 2018.030(b)]

3. When do work-product issues most commonly arise?
   - When statements are taken from a third-party witness or a report is obtained from an expert. “Work product” of experts consulted by attorney, who will NOT testify at trial, is protected.
• But experts who testify may be compelled to disclose all reports they prepared.
• Federal rules amended in 2010 to potentially include greater protection of communication between an expert and attorney. [FRCP 26(b)(4)]
• The work of experts/consultants hired before attorney is retained, is not protected by the WPD.
• Protection may be lost if document is inadvertently disclosed.

Other privileges that protect documents include the following:

• Physician-patient privilege - communications between a doctor and patient involving medical treatment; HIPAA.
• Spousal privilege - private communications between spouses.
• Priest-penitent privilege - statement made privately to a member of the clergy in the course of a confession or counseling.
• Fifth Amendment - gives an individual the right to refuse to answer a question if the answer would tend to incriminate him/her.
• Privileges granted in some states to communications with police, accountants, journalists, social workers, and others.

Leaving Your Externship

As your externship draws to a close, you can take a number of measures to ensure that you will be remembered favorably and that your supervisor will provide good references to future employers. Employers are always impressed with students who leave their position in a professional manner. Keep these steps in mind:

1. Remind your employer of your end date a few weeks in advance. Find out how you should focus your efforts before you leave.

2. Finish your assignments to the extent possible. Write closing memoranda on each project that you are leaving open, including a summary of the work you have completed. This will ensure that your supervisor will not be frustrated wondering where to find something you worked on, and that your successor will not have to replicate your work. Provide your contact information on the closing memoranda and offer to be available to answer any questions.

3. Get names and numbers. Do not assume you will remember all of the attorneys and staff with whom you worked. Make sure you have names and contact information for them. If you have reason to think that someone with whom you worked might leave the organization, ask if there is another way to contact them. Do not ask directly for home or other personal contact information. It may be offered to you, but you should not ask for it.

4. Make sure that your supervisor gives you an honest appraisal of your work. A few weeks before your end date, schedule a date for an exit interview. It may be wise to set this date when you still expect to be at the externship for at least another week in case something comes up that can be corrected in your final days. (Alternatively, discussing with your supervisor his/her final-term evaluation of your work performance may constitute an exit interview, but make sure to schedule this meeting.) Be prepared to ask specific questions. Many employers are reluctant to provide negative comments directly to a student, but if you make clear that you would like to hear constructive criticism, you are more likely to receive it. Ask about specific projects you worked on and how you might have improved. If you are interested in pursuing a career in the field, ask what additional skills would be helpful for you to obtain. Do not be defensive about anything that you are told. Thank them for the feedback they give, even if it is negative. Make sure you tell your employer how much you enjoyed the work, and show enthusiasm for the experience.

5. Ask your supervisor to write a letter of recommendation for you before you leave your externship, even if you do not need it yet. The letter might be addressed “to whom it may concern,” which would allow you to distribute copies to any prospective employer. By the time you need a recommendation, your supervisor will have had many more student externs and may no longer remember the details of the projects to which you were assigned and the quality of your work. Worse yet, your supervisor may leave the organization and may be impossible to track down. To reduce the burden on your supervisor in writing this letter, you might provide her with a detailed list of the projects you worked on and what work you did on each assignment.
6. After you leave your placement, stay in touch with your supervisor and with your colleagues. If you developed friendly relationships, occasionally call or write to the people with whom you worked to say hello, ask them how they are doing, and let them know what is going on with you. If you see a decision you believe would help on a case or one that further develops the law in an area they work in, send it to them. Send a thank you note. Call for advice. If you are struggling with some career issues, use this as an excuse to contact them. This keeps your network strong and ensures they will remember you after you have gone. Develop and maintain a list of people for whom you have worked and send an update to each person on that list each time you start a new job.

Describe the educational objectives of the externship:

The following are the minimum standards expected of site supervisors, faculty directors, and externs to receive academic credit. All externships will consist of two components: (a) a work experience under the supervision of the site supervisor; and (b) an academic component under the supervision of the faculty director.
Site Supervisor’s Agreement:

Thank you for your support, supervision, and mentoring of a law student extern. Please sign the agreement and add any comments on this form. As a site supervisor, I agree to the following:

Orientation: I will ensure that the extern receives an orientation, including a discussion of office procedures and confidentiality, and an overview of the work and expectations of the extern.

Supervision: I have the authority, ability, and resources to ensure that the extern has a supervising attorney who will actively direct, monitor, and mentor him or her throughout the semester.

Communication: I will inform the extern of the system for assigning work projects and ensure he or she is given clear deadlines and will receive ongoing guidance for managing the workload.

Skills Development: The extern will be engaged in a substantial lawyering experience that includes multiple opportunities for performance, feedback, and self-evaluation.

Assignments: The extern will be assigned work that is similar to that of a law clerk or entry-level staff attorney, including exposure to a broad range of lawyering skills. Assignments may include drafting documents and pleadings, researching and writing memoranda, interviewing clients and witnesses, attending conferences, negotiations or mediations, and observing or participating in meetings, depositions, or court proceedings. Administrative work will be kept to a minimum.

Feedback: The extern will be provided specific, individualized, and timely feedback on their work.

Observation: The extern may have opportunities to observe court proceedings, client/staff/strategy meetings, and other appropriate professional activities.

Opportunities for Reflection: The extern will meet with his/her supervisor, other attorneys and staff to discuss his/her observations, experiences, and other issues relevant to the profession.

Supervisor Accessibility: The extern and supervising attorney should meet at least weekly. In addition to any standing meetings, the supervising attorney will be able to meet with the extern as needed to provide support and feedback on assignments.

Forms: I will comply with the school’s evaluation requirements, including reviewing any student self-assessments, completing evaluations, and providing feedback to the extern in a timely manner.

Logistics: I will verify that the extern has a designated workspace and access to the tools (e.g., telephone, computer, library) and support reasonably necessary to complete assignments.

Fee Generating Matters: Where the extern is assigned work on fee-generating matters, the extern’s time will not be billed, and the work assigned is in furtherance of the extern’s legal education.

Hours: For 4 extern units, the student must record 180 hours of supervised legal work during the 5 week externship.

Site Visits: In compliance with ABA Accreditation Standards, the USF Program Director may conduct site visits to ensure that the placement is providing an appropriate level and quality of skills training in a professional environment. Depending on these visits and/or communications, please note that the law school has full discretion to disapprove or inactivate a placement from participating for any period of time.

Extern’s Agreement:

The extern should sign and add any comments on this form. As an extern, I agree to the following:

Professionalism: I agree to follow directions, seek clarification and advice in a timely fashion, and comport myself with professionalism and integrity.

Development Goals: I will create goals for the program of how I plan to develop professionally and will discuss these with my site supervisor and faculty director.

Academic Component: I agree to complete all requirements of the program as requested by the faculty director and outlined in the Syllabus.

Opportunities for Reflection: I will reflect on the observations, experiences, ethical considerations, and other issues that arise during my externship. As directed by my faculty director, I will submit weekly reflections analyzing my experiences. In so doing, I will be mindful of my confidentiality obligations.

Self-Evaluation: I will strive to self-assess on each assignment I complete. In so doing, I will consider what I did effectively and areas for improvement. Where possible and appropriate, I will discuss my self-assessment with my faculty director and site supervisors. I will be open to feedback from my supervisors and will consider how it can be applied specifically and globally to my future work.

The start and end dates of my externship are:

- Start Date: ________________
- End Date: ________________

I understand that to receive 4 externship units, I must, on average, work 36 hours per week for 5 weeks for a total of 180 recorded hours during the program.

Faculty Director’s Agreement:

The faculty director has read and agreed to perform the following:

Academic Requirements: I will establish requirements designed to develop the extern’s experience in their placement, including encouraging self-evaluation and reflection.

Site Evaluation: I will remain in regular contact, including possible visits, with the externship site and the extern to ensure the quality of the educational experience.

Availability: I will be available as a resource should any concerns or issues arise.

Evaluation: I will evaluate the extern’s academic performance during the externship. The assessment will be based, inter alia, on the extern and supervisor evaluations, timely compliance with requirements, the quality of the self-reflection, and professionalism. Based on this evaluation, I will determine whether credit should be granted.
