

USF Task Force to Support Undocumented Students

Magis Fellowship for Undergraduate Students

The Magis Fellowship provides opportunities for undergraduate students at the University of San Francisco to contribute to the university's mission to support undocumented students and the larger undocumented community. The Magis Fellowship is a leadership development opportunity for students with a passion for making higher education more accessible to undocumented students.

Working closely with a faculty or staff mentor from the USF Task Force to Support Undocumented Students, Magis Fellows will develop innovative projects which address specific barriers and challenges faced by the undocumented community. Projects should seek to: educate the campus community; build support for undocumented students off and on campus; and/or improve access to higher education for undocumented students. Projects may include, but are not limited to:

- Planning an educational presentation or workshop for the USF community
- Publishing a blog, Op-Ed, or other piece of public scholarly writing
- Developing of a policy brief or position paper
- Supporting the Task Force to Support Undocumented Students

Fellows receive support from faculty and staff mentors to ensure the fellowship does not only benefit the campus community but is also a developmental and leadership opportunity for the student.

Fellowship grants are awarded based on the scope of project (not to exceed $8,000 per student per academic year).

Applying students should be in good academic standing. All undergraduate USF students are eligible to apply.

The application deadline for Magis Fellowship is rolling. Application should include the following:

- Personal statement explaining student's connection to the issue (no more than 1 page)
- Description of proposed project (no more than 1 page)
