DISCUSSION DRAFT

USF 2028

The University of San Francisco is committed to excellence in teaching, scholarship, service, creative expression, and every other aspect of the educational experience offered to its students.

USF is a university in the Jesuit Catholic tradition which views the academic enterprise as central to the full human development of students and the promotion of justice, especially for the poor and disenfranchised.

The following four characteristics, taken together, set USF apart and make it distinctive from other universities: its Jesuit Catholic tradition; its unique geographical location; its commitment to diversity of all kinds; its global perspective.

For the University to distinguish itself from the other 4,200 institutions of higher education in the country, it must highlight its distinctive attributes so that they are clearly identified with USF by its various publics. Under each of the four characteristics listed below are bullet points that further specify that characteristic.

1. Jesuit Catholic tradition: USF offers an academically excellent education that promotes the development of students into women and men for others who contribute to the common good of society, particularly the vulnerable and disenfranchised. As a Catholic university, USF asserts the centrality of God as a question that engages believers and non-believers alike.

- a. emphasizes the pursuit of excellence in the context of providing students with a rigorous, humanizing education. That education offers students the wherewithal to wrestle with “big questions” of ultimate meaning and purpose in order to live reflective lives with passion and integrity and thereby realize the fullness of our “graced” humanity;
- b. promotes conversation between faith and reason, religion and culture, belief and non-belief and among different faith traditions;
- c. responds appropriately to the needs of the Catholic Church through teaching, research, service, and creative expression;

- d. views knowledge as both an “end-in-itself” and as a necessary but insufficient means for full human development and the creation of a more just and humane world for all;
- e. provides students with the knowledge, skills, sensitivities, and motivation to become men and women for others who show a special concern for the poor and marginalized;
- f. acknowledges the moral dimension in human choices and, therefore, recognizes all significant decisions as moral choices with important consequences for both the individual and society;
- g. provides opportunities for persons of all faiths and for Catholics in particular, to explore, share, celebrate and appropriate their faith tradition.

2. San Francisco location: USF contributes to and benefits from the distinctive energy, resources, and opportunities of a world-class city located at the edge of the Pacific Rim and known for its cultural diversity and innovation.

- a. links student learning with the cultural, civic, legal, commercial and scientific opportunities in San Francisco, e.g., internships, practica, service learning classes;
- b. draws from the creativity, diversity, and entrepreneurial energy that distinguishes San Francisco from other great cities of the world;
- c. forges alliances with community organizations that offer research opportunities for faculty and ongoing active student learning which mutually benefits both the university and the community;
- d. convenes community interest groups and organizations around issues of common concern and offers a platform from which local and regional issues may be collaboratively addressed by all parties concerned;
- e. serves as a social, educational and economic agent by applying creative expression, knowledge, and research skills in promoting human development, advancing understanding, and improving the quality of life for all Bay Area residents and enriching academic quality at the university.

3. Diversity: USF prepares students for the complexities of a diverse and interdependent world through curricular and co-curricular offerings supplemented by the variety of backgrounds, interests, perspectives, ethnicities, and cultures represented both within the city and the university.

- a. recruits and retains faculty, students, and students who contribute to the University's efforts to engage diversity of all kinds as an essential resource for quality education in a national and global context;
- b. creates structures, programs, and courses that constructively engage differences so that participants deepen their understanding of what distinguishes individuals and groups within the human family, while appreciating our common humanity;
- c. ensures that different voices and perspectives are present in curricula, programs and activities across the university so that students engage the full complexity and richness of the human experience;
- d. promotes disciplinary competence for students and faculty while at the same time offering them opportunities to cooperatively probe issues, questions, and problems from multi-disciplinary perspectives;
- e. capitalizes on the cultural richness of San Francisco in order to enhance students' understanding and appreciation of one of the world's most successfully diverse and multicultural cities.

4. Global perspective: USF welcomes the challenges and opportunities offered by our increasingly interdependent world and acknowledges its responsibility for addressing the inequities of a world where 2 billion people struggle to survive on $2 a day.

- a. exposes students and faculty to the inhumane conditions which diminish the lives of 75 percent of the global community;
- b. educates students to their responsibility for pursuing a common good that transcends national boundaries and embraces issues adversely affecting the well-being of the entire global village, e.g., environmental justice, the creation and just distribution of wealth and resources, war, migration of peoples, health, and education;
- c. recruits and retains students, faculty, and staff with global experience and perspectives to ensure that the wide breadth of experience and views characteristic of our world inform USF's culture and teach students to be global thinkers;

- d. develops courses, programs, and experiences that help students understand and appreciate differing contexts in our global society and enable them to function appropriately and respectfully in an interdependent world and to contribute professionally across the globe;
- e. acts in an environmentally responsible manner which acknowledges that the earth and its resources should be shared justly among all people and held in trust for future generations.

Key Question:

What are the most strategically effective steps USF must take over the next five years to offer an academically excellent education that reflects the Jesuit Catholic tradition, draws from the resources and opportunities of San Francisco, capitalizes on the diversity of USF, and prepares students to contribute to the common good of the entire global community?

The University of San Francisco
Division of University Life
Strategic Goals and Outcomes (2007-2010)

University Life Strategic Goal 1:

Create and implement a student leadership development plan that promotes social responsibility through student integration of knowledge, skills and practice.

To further USF's Vision to "educate leaders who will fashion a more humane and just world" and to institutionalize social responsibility and leadership in the undergraduate student experience, University Life will actively promote the development of socially responsible student leaders by engaging students, faculty and staff in leadership as an on-going process designed to influence social change that "creates, communicates, and applies knowledge to a world shared by all people and held in trust for future generations." Programs will increase students' understanding of themselves, others, and the broader community in the context of leadership, change, and a commitment to USF's Core Values.

To achieve the first strategic goal, we intend to accomplish the following three

Outcomes:

- a. Implement student leadership development programs based on USF's Core Values and the Social Change Model of Leadership. (Greg Wolcott)
- b. Develop a co-curricular transcript program that assists students in tracking their involvement, building a more complete resume, and reflecting on their USF student experience. (James Cattigay)
- c. Partner with faculty to develop a Leadership Minor which includes credit bearing curricular and co-curricular components. (Greg Wolcott)

University Life Strategic Goal 2:

Increase University Life's ability to build an inclusive community at USF.

To fulfill USF's mission of building a "diverse, socially responsible learning community" by "engag[ing] a diversity of perspectives, experiences and traditions as essential components of a quality education" and to institutionalize diversity as a learning resource for students and staff, University Life will develop and retain multiculturally aware, knowledgeable, and skilled persons and professionals by challenging students and staff to engage in honest dialogue and reflect upon experiences of identify, difference, privilege, and equity.

To achieve the second strategic goal, we intend to accomplish the following three

Outcomes:

- d. Establish the Council of Equity and Inclusion to (i) develop and implement a sustained cultural competence professional development series, (ii) facilitate opportunities for ongoing dialogue within University Life on multiculturalism, personal identity and differences and (iii) submit recommendations regarding cultural competence and diversity initiatives to the Vice President. (Mary Grace Almandrez)
- e. Partner with University constituencies to create learning opportunities on cultural competence for first-year students. (Barbara Thomas)
- f. Expand the Allies Training Program to educate on privilege, identity development, cultural competence and ally-building. (Steve Nygaard)

University Life Strategic Goal 3:

Promote student success.

To “enroll, support and graduate a diverse student body”, University Life will continue to foster a supportive learning environment focused on improving student centered space and positively impacting the holistic development of identified student populations at critical times in their undergraduate student experience.

To achieve the third strategic goal, we intend to accomplish the following two Outcomes:

- g. Improve student-centered spaces. Advise planning efforts for a renovated, student-centered University Center. (Andy Thomson)
- h. Analyze, make recommendations, and begin plan for a first-year non-residential student experience. (Linda Thomas)

Promoting Diversity and Student Leadership at the University of San Francisco

2004-2005 University Life Annual Report

1. Year in Review

Staffing

During the year, the MCSS staff expanded to include one graduate assistant, three student assistants, and one Minority Undergraduate Fellowship Program (MUFP) Fellow. Elena Coley joined the staff as a GA. She is currently enrolled in the MBA program and came to USF from Coastcom in Alameda, where she worked as a marketing researcher. Her main projects included the UL Progressive Party, MCSS Newsletter (“Perspectives”), and public relations. Student Assistant, Ashley González, was a first-year student who provided administrative support for the Allies training program and the Culturally Focused Club Council (CFCC). Leigh Lehman, sophomore, assisted the GA in producing the MCSS Newsletter, as well updated residence hall bulletin boards. Desiree Littlejohn, sophomore, worked closely with the Assistant Dean in planning the Grad School Luncheon, Latino Recognition Ceremony, and Vizuri Kabiza. María Vivanco, junior, received mentorship from the Assistant Dean in Student Affairs career development, and completed a benchmark survey of bias-related incident policies at Jesuit institutions. After collapsing five GA positions within the division, the Assistant Dean was able to recruit and hire a new Coordinator for MCSS, Simon Hara, from a pool of 97 candidates. Simon received his M.Ed. in Higher Education and Student Affairs Administration from the University of Vermont and completed his undergraduate studies in sociology from UC Santa Barbara. He is charged with advising both FACES and CFCC, and implementing student leadership programs, such as LRC and VK.

Program Development

MCSS focused its programs on three main areas: Cultural Competency & Social Justice, Leadership Development, and Ally-Development & Coalition-Building.

- Cultural Competency and Social Justice: In an effort to promote cultural competency, the Assistant Dean facilitated a number of diversity and ethnic identity workshops for both staff and students, including: DSA staff, ORL Central Staff, Asian Pacific American Student Coalition (APASC), AS Funded Accounts, Fall Leadership Institute participants, first-year athletes, Freshmen Leadership Institute participants, GO Team, Magis Leadership Training participants, and RAs. In addition, the Assistant Deans for MCSS, as well as Judicial Affairs and Ethical Development, formed the Bias-Related Incident Committee to review the University’s current policy, make changes as appropriate, and develop a campus-wide policy training program.
- Leadership Development: Several shifts occurred during the year that reflected MCSS’ commitment to leadership development among historically marginalized, underrepresented, and underserved students. For example, advising for FACES, LRC, and VK moved to MCSS. CFCC was restructured to provide student leaders from the various cultural clubs with leadership, diversity, and coalition-building training. In fact, CFCC representatives participated in workshops on campus activism with Mike Duffy (UM) and Julie Reed (McCarthy Center for Public Service and the Common Good), intercultural communication with Christina Sanchez (ISS), and leadership styles with Sarah Mart (HPS).

- Ally Development and Coalition Building: Administrative support for Allies training moved to MCSS. Over 50 students, faculty, and staff completed the USF Allies Training. Creating Community Training for student leaders will be housed under MCSS beginning in the 2005-2006 academic year.

Faculty/Staff Outreach

- Relationship Building: The Assistant Dean made intentional efforts to reach out to faculty and staff as a means to create a safe and supportive environment for students of color. Over the course of the fall semester, she met one-on-one with 18 faculty in Biology, Communication Studies, Education, History, English, Media Studies, Modern & Classical Languages, Philosophy, Politics, Psychology, Sociology, and Yuchengco Philippines Studies. In addition, she met one-on-one with nine non-UL staff members in Admissions, Learning & Writing Center, McCarthy Center, and Senior Leadership.
- Collaborative Programming: The Assistant Dean collaborated with Gerardo Marín to develop and implement two inaugural programs focused on connecting faculty, staff, and students of color. The first was an off-campus fall retreat with the intended outcomes of creating an opportunity for faculty/staff and students of color to build both intergroup and intragroup relationships, as well as conducting a needs assessment of faculty/staff and students of color. A few months after the retreat, Felicia Lee and Miguel Lopez facilitated follow-up discussions with students, faculty, and staff of color to present concerns, recommendations, and feedback to Gerardo Marín regarding their experiences at USF. The second program was included in the Career Services Center grad school programming. MCSS, CSC, and Gerardo hosted a Grad School Luncheon that allowed undergraduate students of color to network with graduate students and faculty of color. Nearly 50 students and 20 faculty/staff/grad students participated.
- Curriculum Development: During the spring semester, the Assistant Dean attended meetings for Asian American Studies and Yuchengco Philippines Studies, and has joined the committee that is developing the Latino/Chicano Studies program.
- Phelan Multicultural Community: Stephanie Sears (Sociology), Danielle Trimiew (UM) and the Assistant Dean accompanied seven PMC students to Kingston, Jamaica where they engaged in 10 days of service activities with the St. Patrick's Foundation. Service locations included an elementary school, high school, and hospital. In addition, they engaged in intercultural exchange opportunities such as an island-wide anti-violence rally, Bob Marley museum trip, and Ocho Rios day trip. In addition, PMC was renamed the Esther Madriz Multicultural Scholars Community to reflect the intentional partnership between Sociology, MCSS, ORL, UM, and Office of Living-Learning Communities. MCSS is now charged with developing and implementing a co-curriculum focused on identity development and community development.
- Support Teams: In an effort to exchange information between and among student organization advisors, the Assistant Dean formed support teams (modeled after Kasamahan's advisory team) for ethnic specific student organizations. These support teams led to three community dialogues among Latino student groups, African American student groups, and Asian Pacific American student groups. In addition, the Assistant Dean and Dean of Students led a discussion on “Student Issues” as part of the Underrepresented Faculty Mentoring Workshop Series, coordinated by Gerardo Marín.

- Grant Proposal: In May, the Assistant Dean and Ron Sundstrom (Philosophy) submitted a Difficult Dialogues grant proposal to the Ford Foundation. The proposal included curricular and co-curricular programs, reparative dialogues (focused on issues of gender, sexuality, ethnicity, immigration, and religious pluralism), and faculty development. Unfortunately, the proposal was not accepted.

3. Highlights of Major University Life Goals

a. What realized outcomes can you use to celebrate? Which outcomes (realized or not) will you use to plan for next year?

I believe my major accomplishments throughout the year fall into four categories:

- 1) Reestablishing MCSS: MCSS began the year with a completely new staff. I hired one GA and three student assistants to help rebuild the office. Together we all developed and organized a number of signature events including VK and LRC. MCSS also sponsored new events such as the Grad School Luncheon and CFCC Welcome Back Reception. The MCSS staff were critical in the success of these programs. In addition, a MUFJ Fellow and ASUSF Student of Color Rep. were included as part of the MCSS team to bring a “macro” perspective on the student experience at USF. They were helpful in sharing information on University issues and policies. In May, I eliminated the GA position in order to hire a new Coordinator. The Coordinator’s position will take on student programs and training (e.g., FACES, CFCC) while I work more on faculty outreach, co-curricular development, and advisor training. Along with staffing, MCSS has achieved greater visibility and use. Students, faculty, and staff visit the office regularly to discuss programs, share updates, or chat informally. I believe the staff’s visibility at various events, our monthly newsletter, and student and faculty outreach played a major role in our office traffic.
- 2) Student leadership development: MCSS’ adopted the philosophy that leadership is a process and we envision all students as leaders. Different from the “traditional” (i.e., military) view of leadership as simply positions, we strive to create opportunities for students to get involved in MCSS programs and practice their leadership skills and abilities in whichever capacity they choose. Along with this, we try not to overtax our already overtaxed leaders. Rather than asking the same ten students to participate in various committees, we intentionally reach out to students who do not hold leadership positions and who may not have prior leadership experience. In addition, we try to affirm those students who do not always get recognition for their hard work. For instance, during the awards selection process for VK and LRC, the committee decided, whenever possible, to award students who exemplified exceptional leadership and service but had not been recognized at other recognition ceremonies (e.g., University Life Leadership Awards) in the past. By doing so, the recognition would be shared by various students rather than the same three we see at every awards program.

- 3) Faculty outreach: I've very much enjoyed meeting and working with faculty at USF. Through my one-on-one meetings, departmental discussions, and student organization events, I've had the opportunity to get to know many of our faculty of color. I've established positive collegial relationships, as well as close friendships with a number of them. Together, we've been able to provide input on program planning, curriculum development, and student leadership development for various groups. I believe my outreach efforts will result in sustainable collaborative programs in the near future, as well as greater information exchange.
- 4) Co-curricular development: In partnership with Sociology (particularly Stephanie Sears), I predict the Esther Madriz Multicultural Scholars Community will be an exemplary living-learning community at USF and at all Jesuit institutions. Working with her for the PMC trip in Jamaica solidified both our professional and personal relationships with one another and I look forward to working more with her in 2005-2006. We work well together and share the same views on learning, teaching, pedagogy, and scholarship. We developed the syllabus for her fall course, Social Problems, and are currently developing our karamu (co-curriculum) schedule.

Next year, I plan to enhance and expand our current MCSS programs rather than create new wheels. For instance, as Simon works on leadership development for CFCC, I will work with advisors on facilitating workshops, student affairs praxis, and leadership development theory. I will also have the opportunity to help shape the curriculum for Asian American Studies and Latino/Chicano Studies to hopefully include various courses such as culturally-based leadership.

- b. When did collaboration (by our agreed upon model) work? What about next year?
I was fortunate to collaborate with individuals who had a common understanding of collaboration as UL. The Esther Madriz program, for example, was an "easy" process because Stephanie understood these notions of shared vision and accountability. The Community of Color Retreat and Grad School Luncheon went smoothly because of our shared commitment among all departments involved. The areas of growth I see for next year are: collaboration among student organization support teams (addressing both intercultural and cross-cultural issues) and partnership for the first-year student transition (working with Multicultural Recruitment and Retention and Foreword).
- c. How did the department create a supportive University community for and with students?
MCSS places students at the center of all our work. When possible, student voices were included in MCSS programs. VK and LRC planning committees were composed of students from the various student organizations, as well as students at large who were interested in organizing the event. FACES programs were done in consultation from me so that we all had consistent language and messages around issues of social justice and multiculturalism. Student mentorship was practiced daily through MUFPP meetings, informal interactions, and e-mail communication. The MCSS office was used as a meeting location, collating space, and brainstorming center. The staff and I modeled information exchange as a means to connect faculty/student organization advisors with their E-board members. In MCSS we place students' needs at the top of our priority list.

d. What integrated learning experiences did the department collaborate on?

Throughout the year, MCSS collaborated with various departments to integrate multicultural perspectives in campus programs and initiatives. These programs included:

- UL Progressive Party/Open House with all UL departments and Study Abroad
- World AIDS Day focus groups with HPS
- Native American Heritage Month Celebration with MEChA de USF
- AIDS Quilt Display chaired by the AIDS Week Committee
- Interdenominational Service of Remembrance for the Southeast Asia Tsunami Victims chaired by Christina Sanchez
- Six Creating Community Grant Awards

e. How did programs and services reflect the VMV- with emphasis on the Core Values?

These programs were clear examples of MCSS' commitment to social justice and working in solidarity with others for the common good. We attempted to empower marginalized groups and raise consciousness around important social issues. In MCSS, multiculturalism and social justice are not mutually exclusive. In fact, they are often one and the same.

4. Reflection on Social Responsibility

I would not be doing this job had I not felt a sense of social responsibility. As I reflect on my personal experiences in undergrad around access, equity, and success, I know I would not have made it this far were it not for the people of color and our allies who empowered me to think beyond what I thought was possible. For instance, upon graduating, I initially sought out positions in either charter schools or non-profit youth organizations. It was not until an EOP counselor informed me that I could get my graduate degree for free if I worked in higher ed did I even consider getting my PhD. My social responsibility, then, is to inform more students of color that graduate school is a realistic and attainable option. Another example is my student leadership experience. I was actively involved on campus as an officer of culturally-focused student organizations, Orientation Team, and AS. I saw, however, how very rare it was that my peers and I were ever recognized at University-wide events. In fact, we were only recognized by our respective cultural organizations and the Multicultural Center. This, in turn, has prompted me to either provide opportunities or make room for students of color to be honored by the University. In short, I do not see a distinction between my personal and professional views of social responsibility. These views are very much intertwined. This is reflected in my departmental goals and strategic plan. I firmly believe that all students have a right to access, equity, and success.

Multicultural Student Services (MCSS)

2005-2006 University Life Annual Report

1. YEAR IN REVIEW

Staffing

There are three new additions to the MCSS staff. The first was Simon K. Hara, Coordinator. He came to USF from the University of Vermont, where he received his graduate degree in Higher Education and Student Affairs Administration. He advised CFCC, FACES, and recognition ceremonies committees. The second new staff member was Jesse Soto, junior. He was hired as a student assistant and served on last year's Latino Recognition Ceremony committee. The third addition was Rayneisha Booth, sophomore. Last year she served as a BSU representative on CFCC.

Program Development

MCSS continued to promote social justice by implementing programs that were focused on cultural competency, multicultural leadership, and ally-development.

Cultural Competency

Cultural Competency encompasses awareness, knowledge, and skills around diversity, multicultural, and social justice issues. MCSS is committed to promoting cultural competency within the staff and with those involved in MCSS programs.

Creating Community Training: The Assistant Dean organized the second annual Creating Community Training from August 14-16. The training was facilitated by Dr. Jamie Washington and Dr. Carole Johnson. Nearly 100 student leaders participated, representing ASUSF, GO Team, RAs, and RHA.

After reading student evaluations and consulting with colleagues in DSA and ORL several changes have been made in the design of future Creating Community Trainings. The following will be integrated in subsequent trainings: involve returners as facilitators/planners to stretch their leadership and multicultural skills, provide resource packets for advisors to continue discussing those issues brought up during the training, and include case studies or activities that allow students to apply and practice their cultural competency. In addition, next academic year will be a transition year where Creating Community will be held twice during the fall semester (Ambassador Training and Fall Institute) and subsequent trainings will be held in April (beginning in 2007) immediately following elections and student leader selections (e.g., RAs, Go Team, etc.). These changes not only address fall training schedules and housing arrangements, but they also allow students to begin the academic build relationships and start collaborating before the beginning of the academic year. In addition, the Assistant Dean will connect with colleagues in University Ministry and the Office of Service-Learning and Community Action to discuss the possibility of inviting UM students and Advocates for Civic Engagement (ACEs) to participate in future trainings.

Workshops: MCSS staff facilitated several workshops throughout the year for students and staff. They include:

- ORL Senior Staff Summer Training,
- Creating Community,
- Health & Harmony for the Foreword program with the Director of HPS,
- Culturally Competent Student Organizations for the Fall Leadership Institute,
- Weaving Narratives of Difference to Build Solidarity for the Magis Leadership Program,
- Diversity Training for Freshmen Leadership Institute,
- Dimensions of Power for the Martin-Baró Scholars with the Director and Intern for ISS, and
- semi-annual weekend retreats for FACES and CFCC

Multicultural Leadership:

MCSS embeds the Social Change Model of Leadership Development, Ethic of Care, and Core Jesuit Values into all leadership programs. In addition, we believe that leadership is a process – not position – and that all students are leaders on campus. We encourage and support recruitment of students who are not already involved in campus activities while encouraging and mentoring already active students to pursue leadership opportunities within and beyond culturally-focused student organizations.

MCSS Student Assistants: In addition to office management, student assistants were given the opportunity to develop their leadership skills through participation in end-of-the-year committees. Two staff members chaired the Vizuri Kabisa committee while one chaired and another served on the Latino Recognition Ceremony committee. The Assistant Dean and Coordinator observed increased development in project management, facilitation, recruitment, and motivation skills. In fact, both VK and LRC received praise from administrators, faculty, and students due largely to the work and efforts of the student assistants. Also, MCSS student staff modeled and promoted collaboration within and between the various student committees. This led to a greater number of assistance and visibility during the ceremonies. After observing the intergroup support, the Assistant Dean and Coordinator have decided to expand the weekly co-chairs meetings (designed primarily for updates) to include monthly gatherings of all three committees, combined training (e.g., paperwork, filing, facilitating meetings), and combined workshops on collaboration.

Along with committee work, student assistants developed leadership skills through monthly case studies exercises. Students worked in small groups to develop solutions to common MCSS scenarios. Students shared that they used the conflict management, problem-solving, and ally-development skills they learned from the case studies in their work in leadership positions and committee service.

By the end of the academic year, student assistants were appointed/elected to participate in leadership opportunities outside of MCSS, including: RA, CFCs, end-of-the-year celebrations, and ASUSF Senate.

CFCC: CFCC members attended an off-campus retreat in September and met weekly to participate in multicultural workshops. During the fall semester, guest presenters included the Dean of Students, Assistant Dean of Students, and the Associate Dean for Student Development. Discussion topics ranged from privilege to ethic of care to international student discrimination. After hearing feedback from members to continue dialogue around cultural competency issues, the Coordinator decided to concentrate their spring meetings on anti-racism strategies, coalition-building, and community engagement. At the end of the year, members suggested addressing issues of CFCC membership retention, individual student organization support, as well as intergroup collaboration. Therefore, the following changes will be implemented next year:

- The Coordinator will work closely with the Presidents of each culturally-focused club to ensure the CFCC representative is either an elected position or added responsibility of an already elected position (e.g., VP),
- CFCC representatives will encourage their respective clubs to provide airtime during club meetings to announce CFCC updates,
- While the Council will be comprised of representatives, the meetings will be open to the campus community,
- MCSS will split cultural competency training from CFCC so that a greater emphasis can be placed on coalition-building and information sharing (the Coordinator will be offering a cultural competency training certificate program that is separate from the council), and
- The Assistant Dean will work with club advisors on the role of CFCC and strategies to support intergroup collaboration.

FACES: FACES began the academic year with a three-part kick-off event. The first part was a Senegalese food/Sila and the Afrofunk Experience Concert event in Harney Plaza. The second was a dialogue on the conflict in Sudan. The third was a viewing and discussion of The Lost Boys of Sudan. Upon reflecting on these events and assessing membership satisfaction, FACES decided to focus on cultural competency during the spring semester.

The spring semester was a busy one for FACES. They began with a weekend retreat facilitated by the Coordinator for MCSS, where they learned terminology and paradigms for critical discourse around issues of privilege, power, and difference. Later, they organized a demonstration in front of Crossroads to challenge their peers about a “Donate for a Date” Auction that took place on Valentine’s Day. After receiving feedback from administrators as well as students at large, FACES followed up by: collaborating with Student of Color Representatives and MEChA de USF to sponsor an ASUSF Senate resolution requesting more proactive measures from USF administration to educate the campus community on issues of privilege and multiculturalism, and participating in a dialogue between Crossroads staff and FACES members to reflect on the date auction held earlier in the semester. The dialogue ended with hopes to collaborate on future programs. The last event was a spoken word poetry night, titled “Spoken Truth.” The event was a symbolic demonstration of support for the Coalition for Immigrants Rights’ hunger strike, concentrating on the themes of social responsibility and confronting cultural insensitivity/privilege. The event drew a crowd of 150. Based on these experiences, the group decided to continue building coalitions with student leaders (e.g., Student of Color Representatives, CFC officers) and address current social issues affecting USF students. In addition, the Coordinator will create intentional training opportunities for FACES members to learn and practice effective skills for sustained dialogues.

Student of Color Representatives: The Coordinator for MCSS built and sustained positive working relationships with ASUSF Student of Color Representatives through FACES activities and one-on-one meetings. Student Representatives were valuable resource to MCSS, keeping the Coordinator informed of current issues and student trends. In turn, the Coordinator provided them with support and mentorship around their ASUSF responsibilities. As a result of these interactions, the Coordinator will utilize these representatives as key facilitators during CFCC meetings. This will not only provide them with additional leadership development opportunities, but it will also assist in coalition-building among the various student organizations.

End-of-the-Year Celebrations: Three recognition celebrations were sponsored by MCSS: Filipino Graduation (newly-added program this year), Vizuri Kabisa, and Latino Recognition Ceremony. All three student committees collaborated with one another during the planning and delivery of their respective programs. The Assistant Dean and Coordinator noticed increased communication, sharing of resources, and support among the three groups, as compared to planning committees from last year. They also noted the increased participation of first-year students, non-CFC officers, and students-at-large in these committees. Lastly, the committees utilized MCSS student assistants as resources, turning to them for information, administrative assistance, and feedback.

After observing their joint efforts and hearing their feedback, the following changes will be implemented next year: extend weekly co-chairs meetings to include all planning committee members twice a month to assist in communication and community-building, provide training earlier in the fall semester to avoid procrastination, and plan the celebrations closer to Commencement to allow more family members to attend. In addition, the chairs of all of next year's committees have already been appointed in order to facilitate early recruitment of committee members (e.g., Involvement Fair).

Ally Development

MCSS believes that inclusive excellence is needed to institutionalize diversity efforts. Because of this, MCSS works towards inclusivity, trying to forge coalitions, partnerships and alliances to infuse diversity work beyond the department and division.

EMSC: This was the inaugural year for the Esther Madriz Scholars Community (EMSC). In honor of the late sociology professor, Dr. Esther Madriz, the community distinguished itself by focusing on knowledge and activism around transnational, social justice issues. In partnership with Dr. Stephanie Sears in Sociology, the Assistant Dean developed a co-curricular workshop series (karamus) that complemented the curriculum and service-learning assignments. By doing so, students received a holistic experience where they learned, practiced, and reflected on their leadership for social justice.

Students in the program began the year with a fall retreat facilitated by Dr. Sears, Lindsey Morales (RA), Janece Hayes (HD), and the Assistant Dean. This helped create community within the group and provided an orientation to the year-long program. In January, the Scholars spent four days in San Diego and Tijuana to study border issues, models of activism, and community organizing. The primary objectives of the experience included: gaining a global perspective on national social problems and their solutions, connecting fall coursework (Social Problems) with spring coursework (Community Organizing), and developing a plan of action to take back to USF. After reflecting with participants and facilitators, program coordinators decided to continue planning their transnational experience in January, as it made sense to use this experience as a pedagogical tool to connect sociological theory with multicultural leadership and activism. In addition, program coordinators coined the tagline “Crossing Borders: Discovering Home” as a way to describe their commitment and experience in transborder issues.

Upon completion of its inaugural year, the first cohort provided important insight on their experiences, leading to a significant refocusing of the program for next year. The Assistant Dean and Sociology partners decided to keep those elements that the community valued (e.g., fall retreat, transborder experience, karamus) while making the following changes: involve the RA and RM in karamus (e.g., leading community-development and reflection exercises), switch the service-learning requirement from first semester to second semester (avoid high turnover in spring), and include the Assistant Dean in the development and implementation of the Sociology curriculum (including service-learning planning).

Program, Events, and Training: Throughout the year, MCSS collaborated with a number of on-campus departments and off-campus partners. The following collaborations were initiated and/or supported by MCSS staff:

- Welcome Back Reception for first-year students and returning students of color with Multicultural Recruitment and Retention - Over 80 people were in attendance, including nearly 20 faculty and staff.
- Second Annual Graduate School Luncheon with CSC and Associate Provost Marín - Nearly 60 students, faculty, and staff of color were in attendance. Student evaluations indicated that the two most valuable aspects of the program were the inspirational keynote speaker (Dr. Kimberly Caluza in Counseling Center) and one-on-one interactions with faculty and staff.
- Foreword Program participation and planning. Both the Assistant Dean and Coordinator attended the Jesuit Values Luncheon to welcome Foreword students. The Assistant Dean co-facilitated “Health & Harmony” workshops with Sarah Mart in HPS. In their evaluations, students noted satisfaction in activities focused on social justice. The Coordinator was also invited to serve on the Foreword planning committee.
- Service-Learning for EMSC with Booker T. Washington Community Services Center – The Assistant Dean collaborated with the community partner throughout the fall semester for activities such as group reflections, film discussion, and community-mapping.
- Yuchengco Philippines Studies – The Assistant Dean participated in the programs meetings and events, including the Tagalog Diagnostic Exams for Professor Lorraine Mallare.

- Yield events with Multicultural Recruitment and Retention – The Assistant Dean participated in “Bienvenidos” and “Make the Journey” overnight programs by delivering the Welcome Address during the evening dinner with families.
- Creating Community Grants with students and faculty – A few grants were awarded this year to promote collaborative programs. They included the Global Women’s Rights Forum with Gender & Sexuality Studies and “Not On Our Campus” campaign with ASUSF Senate and RHA. As part of the “Not On Our Campus” campaign, the Assistant Dean participated in a panel discussion of the film Crash.
- Sociology Colloquim with Dr. Evelyn Rodriguez – The Assistant Dean participated as a panelist during the “Careers in Sociology” workshop. Student feedback indicated that the Assistant Dean’s comments were helpful in informing them of future career considerations.

3. HIGHLIGHTS OF MAJOR UNIVERSITY LIFE OUTCOMES

- a. What realized outcomes can you use to celebrate? Which outcomes (realized or not) will you use to plan for next year?

Highlights from the year include: EMSC program development, increased participation from students-at-large, and continued relationships with faculty and staff collaborators. We hope to build on these accomplishments to enhance and expand collaborative MCSS programs next year. In addition, MCSS hopes to strengthen Creating Community training by incorporating student facilitators, streamline leadership development programs to provide consistent training and coalition-building opportunities, launch an intentional Allies program that integrates social justice elements, and provide a lounge space for students, faculty, and staff to interact in a safe environment.

- b. How did the department create a supportive University community for and with students?

MCSS places students at the center of all our work. We tried to challenge and support students in their programming and activism efforts. This is evidenced by our relationships with students from various student organizations, our program changes as suggested by students, and the frequency of information exchange between staff and students. Also, many students who have been connected to MCSS have been our greatest promoters, recruiting committee members, EMSC participants, and student assistants to join the MCSS family.

Our most effective strategy has been dividing responsibilities between the Coordinator and Assistant Dean. Simon's work as a front-line student advocate has assisted me in my decision making process and communication strategies with students. He has also been instrumental in connecting first-year students to MCSS. His advising, workshop presentations, and overall presence have attracted freshmen to our programs. My work with student assistants, EMSC, and workshop presentations have provided me opportunities to connect with students, as well. We hope to continue strengthening our relationships with CFCs and building bridges with more students at-large.

- c. What integrated learning experiences did the department collaborate on?

See Ally Development section in Question 1.

- d. How did programs and services reflect the VMV- with emphasis on the Core Values?

USF's VMCV, Jesuit values, and ethic of care were clearly and regularly articulated and integrated into MCSS workshops and training, including: MCSS Staff Retreat, EMSC Fall Retreat, CFCC Retreats, FACES retreats, and Creating Community. In addition, MCSS staff adopted the Social Change Theory of Leadership Development in the design and delivery of leadership programs. In addition, I recently completed the first year of the JustFaith curriculum (focused on catholic social teaching on justice issues) at St. Teresa's Church. I am currently participating in the second year of the social justice program. I have used materials, texts, and reflection activities to both inform my work as Assistant Dean and to include in the co-curriculum of EMSC.

2. HIGHLIGHTS OF MAJOR UNIVERSITY LIFE OUTCOMES

The purpose is to provide a high-level leadership analysis of the past year. Please attempt to write more from an outcomes or results perspective and less from a descriptive basis. You will be able to use it as your “elevator speech.” The Vice President will use it at the Divisional and University level.

- a. What realized outcomes can you use to celebrate? Please consider the following:

Integrated Learning

The Esther Madriz Diversity Scholars (EMDS) program was expanded this year to include intentional integration of co-curricular experiences. Several examples include: the Assistant Dean co-teaching the class with Professor Rodriguez to cover topics such as identity, cultural competence, and leadership development; karamu attendance was included as part of the class participation grade; and reflection papers were incorporated into the graded assignments. The expanded pedagogical model led to a deeper appreciation of integrated learning. In addition, the LLC’s theme of “Crossing Borders, Discovering Home” was weaved throughout the program. When asked to reflect on their experiences two scholars commented:

- “It is inevitable that we take with us the things that shape us and help us grow. EMDS made me a better person, and better suited for a life in the fields of social justice. As Father Roy mentioned in his speech on School of the Americas, “An activist is never without a job”, so I guess I shall never be unemployed.” – Martha Espinoza

- “As individuals we must allow ourselves to cross boundaries and borders as we help change and develop the future. By crossing our own borders, knowing who we are and learning new abilities or qualities we may possess through this process, we discover new opportunities that were not there before but exist now, which will aid to change our community. “ – Stephanie Heim

This innovated learning model received national attention when it was presented at two national conferences (NCORE & AAC&U Diversity and Learning), as both a workshop and roundtable discussion, and recognized as one of three universities awarded the “Promising Practice in Student Affairs and Academic Affairs” award at the NASPA/ACPA Joint Convention.

The Coordinator developed three new programs: StEM, SJEP, and Asian Pacific Islander Graduation. During the fall semester, the Coordinator, in collaboration with HPS and ORL, worked with sixteen students in StEM. Student feedback on the program was overwhelmingly positive:

- “I found the community/family feeling of it all to be most valuable. I felt we all bonded and created relationships I can carry throughout college and perhaps later.”
- “The inter-personal dialogues were most valuable to me because they gave me a new and different perspective on something I had already formed an opinion on.”
- “Sharing my stories and hearing other student’s stories was valuable because it was empowering to know that I am not alone in this struggle.”
- “I learned that story telling can help me understand myself and my community.”

The Coordinator continued collaborating with HPS, ORL, and included the Counseling Center to develop and implement the spring semester’s Social Justice Educators Program. The group met each week for three hours, going through experiential exercises and participating in dialogues. Students commented that the experience was challenging and transformative yet ultimately rewarding, as indicated in the two reflections below:

- “SJEP was a really positive experience for me; it continued to develop my passion for social justice work in a safe and supportive environment. Our facilitators shared so much of themselves, but also guided our learning in a way that almost erased the power differential. Week after week, I would look forward to another intense dialogue with my co-learners and co-educators. Being in the program really was a changing experience and I am grateful for everything I learned in it.”
- “(I now feel) responsible to educate my community and also challenge individuals I feel are being oppressive.”

Several of the students will co-facilitate future MCSS workshops and programs.

Under the leadership of the Coordinator, student committees organized three recognition ceremonies. The inaugural Asian Pacific Islander Graduation featured USF alumnus, Chief Heather Fong, as the keynote speaker and honored over twenty-five graduates. Thirty-two graduates (including graduate students) were honored at the 11th Annual Vizuri Kabisa Unity Celebration and over 200 guests were in attendance. Sixty graduates (including graduate students) participated in the 7th Annual Latino Recognition Ceremony and over 350 guests were in attendance. Students in all three committees demonstrated collaboration, leadership, and community-building skills. Their hard work paid off when they received outstanding praise from faculty and staff:

API Graduation

- “I was fortunate to have had the opportunity to speak at length with Chief Heather Fong that evening. She was highly impressed by your [the committee’s] admirable organizational skills and vision for this important inaugural event. The entire Asian American Studies faculty uniformly shared the same sentiment... Your many hours spent in organizing this event set in motion a new era of ethnic consciousness at USF. Thanks to your efforts, students, faculty and staff now have a new and important opportunity to collectively recognize the many gifts and talents that API students bring to our university. And perhaps most importantly, the API graduation ceremony - along with the other ethnic minority student ceremonies - affirm the belief that cultural diversity is to be officially endorsed and commemorated as a community. Your efforts have set an historical precedent in this regard.” -Professor Kevin Chun
- “During the Arts & Science graduation, a number of the Asian American Studies Program faculty happened to converge, and we all agreed how memorable the API grad was. In fact, I got the distinct impression that we all thought it was more special than the college-wide graduation! I've been at USF for 8 or 9 years now, and have often wondered if an API graduation should be formed. You all of course were doing something more than just speculating; you actually acted and the result was a success! Again, thank you.” – Professor David Kim

Vizuri Kabisa

- “Coordinating a program like VK for your peers is one of the most selfless acts you could do for your fellow classmates. It isn't done for accolades; it is done to acknowledge their success and contributions to the community. VK is a true labor of love. I know this first hand being that I served on the VK committee as a student and staff member from '98 until it was coordinated by students. Kudos to MCSS for empowering students to take on this leadership position.” – Sherie Gilmore
- “From the narratives that students shared last night and the statistics on African-American graduation it is evident the challenges that Black students face on a daily in higher education. It is so important that we take opportunities like VK to celebrate the accomplishments that members of our community have made over adversity.” - Darren Pierre

Latino Recognition Ceremony

- “We all can be proud of a tremendously successful event that fosters the meaning of community on our campus and recognizes the accomplishments and dreams fulfilled of our Latin@ graduates and their families. Thank you again for your dedication and support to insure that USF provides the very best for our Latin@ students.” - Allyn Nobles
- “Just a quick note to thank you for the great event you organized last night. It was one of the best events being held on campus (and I attend quite a few...). Your dedication showed and you certainly deserve all kinds of accolades. Last night's Recognition Ceremony is something that makes us proud. Thanks for all the thought and hard work that went into making it a reality." - Gerardo Marin

- "As we know, for many of us within the Latino community, graduating from college is not just a significant achievement--it is a historic moment, as many of us are the first in our families to go to college. Given our mission as a Jesuit institution and our emphasis on educating a diverse community, this type of celebration is a positive reminder of our institutional commitment." - Professor Julio Moreno

Relationship-building with first-year students

The Coordinator made concerted efforts to reach out to first-year students in an effort to cultivate sustained relationships. He, along with the Assistant Dean, co-facilitated a diversity workshop for Foreword students and he served on the Foreword planning committee. He also, with SLE staff, presented a half-day diversity workshop during Freshman Leadership Institute. These interactions led to an increase in first-year student participation in MCSS programs. For instance, nearly all the participants in SteM and SJEP were freshmen. In addition, several first-year students served as committee members for the various recognition ceremonies. Because of his ability to connect with this population, the Coordinator was invited to co-teach a College Success course this summer.

Faculty Collaboration

The Assistant Dean convened a planning meeting for culturally-focused clubs, advisors, and Diversity Studies programs. The purpose of the meeting was to create a communications network among and between the various groups, as well as to begin initial planning for the 2007-8 event calendar. Twenty-four people were attendance including 11 students, four professors, and nine staff. They represented 11 student organizations, four academic programs, and three departments. This meeting led to increased collaboration not only with culturally-focused organizations, but with SLE, as well (e.g., Fall Institute).

Professional Activities

Both the Assistant Dean and Coordinator were active in professional activities. They served in leadership positions in California Council of Cultural Centers in Higher Education (CaCCCHE) and Asian Pacific Islander caucus of the National Conference on Race & Ethnicity (APINCORE) and organized events for both groups. They also served on planning committees for national conferences including the inaugural Point 7 Now Conference.

The Assistant Dean was invited to presented workshops for Santa Clara University, National Conference on Dialogue & Deliberation, College Board Western Regional Forum, and St. Anthony Foundation. The Coordinator was invited to participate in the Institute for Intergroup Relations at the University of Michigan and was selected as a Social Justice Training Institute intern for December 2007.

- b. How did the department create a supportive University community for and with students?

Student input is seriously considered in the development and implementation of MCSS programs and services. In addition, the Assistant Dean and Coordinator make every effort to empower students to make real change on campus. Examples include:

- EMDS RA developing karamu syllabus, transborder activities, and retreat exercises, in partnership with staff and faculty
- Student planning committees for recognition ceremonies
- Development of API Graduation after students expressed interest in event
- Student assistants determining staff development topics and team-building activities
- Reconfiguration of office spaces to include meeting areas
- Use of Lounge to host Counseling Center groups that explore mixed race, first-generation issues, women's issues, and alternative sexualities
- Use of Lounge for prayer space during Ramadan
- Student participation in NCORE and SJTI

After participating in several MCSS programs, several students expressed interest in working in MCSS. Next year, five of those students will join the MCSS staff.

- c. How did programs and services reflect the VMV- with emphasis on the Core Values?

USF's VMCV continue to be included in all MCSS workshops, trainings, and retreats. They also serve as a foundation for the department's annual programs including Creating Community, EMDS, StEM, and SJEP. Social justice is at the heart of the department's programs and events. All MCSS informational materials include language that promotes the university's mission and core values and all MCSS staff orientations have a workshop on core Jesuit values.

3. WHAT DO YOU NEED?

Based on what you learned this past year in trying to advance divisional strategic initiatives as well as implementing departmental operational goals, what do you and your staff need in the programmatic area, the resource area (staffing/budget/space) or the professional development area to be successful.

Three main challenges during the year were budget, space, and staff. The budget, as with many departments, was an issue. Because of the high cost of Creating Community, other program budgets were adjusted. For instance, end-of-the-year celebrations were paid for with the Creating Community Grant account. In addition, with professional staff taking on more leadership roles in associations and student staff attending diversity conferences, both the Assistant Dean and Coordinator had to pay for many professional development expenses out of their own pockets. Budget adjustments will be made this upcoming academic year so that staff will not have to pay for professional development expenses and celebrations (and other programs) can be paid for through the MCSS account.

A multicultural center would be an important asset to the campus and local communities. Split offices and an uncentralized location make it difficult for MCSS to be visible to the wider campus community. There is also a lack of meeting spaces to accommodate groups that are larger than eight people. As MCSS continues to support CFCC and the Student of Color Representatives, it is increasingly important for the department to provide safe and welcoming spaces for students to conduct meetings and simply interact with one another. A centralized location with appropriate square footage would help facilitate community building and collaboration among students, faculty, and staff.

Staffing was also a problem. Because student salary money was used to pay for other programs, the office and lounge were not staffed during all business hours. With next year's budget adjustments, more student staff will be hired to assure appropriate staffing for both spaces. In addition, with the Coordinator taking on more responsibilities of an Assistant Director (e.g., assisting with NCORE, developing StEM, SJEP, and API Grad, assisting with division's strategic priorities), it makes sense to reclassify the position into an Assistant Director position. The Coordinator currently functions similarly to the Assistant Director of the Office of Service-Learning and Community Action and should have a title that reflects the level of strategic planning and goal setting that the job now requires. Hopefully this will be explored further after the external review.

MCOD Category	Purpose	Specific Components
1. Comprehensive definition of the term multicultural	In the interest of serving students, an inclusive and broad definition of multicultural should be chosen. Encouraging discussion of definitional issues is essential so there is agreement among staff members as to where diversity initiatives might be focused.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Use an inclusive definition of diversity</li> <li>• Identify the student groups who have historically been underserved or underrepresented in higher education (e.g., people of color; students with disabilities; nontraditional students; female students; religious minorities; international students; first-generation college students; and lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender students)</li> </ul>
2. Mission statement	A student affairs department or division mission statement identifies its values and priorities and ideally identifies diversity issues as central to the department or division mission.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Explicit use of words such as multicultural or diversity must be an essential part of the mission statement</li> <li>• Incorporate the mission statement into all department publications and advertisements such as brochures and Websites</li> </ul>

3. Leadership and advocacy	Multicultural change efforts in higher education are most successful when they involve the commitment of the top leadership within a college. However, if such top leadership is not available, individuals may take responsibility within their own sphere of influence and attempt to create change.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Set short-term and long-term diversity goals for each year</li> <li>• Give additional rewards and support to those staff members who fully participate in the multicultural vision of the student affairs department/division</li> <li>• Seek out additional multicultural training to assist efforts toward creating a multicultural department/division</li> <li>• Document how supervisors will assist their supervisees in the development of multicultural competencies</li> </ul>
4. Policy review	Multicultural organization development focuses on all significant subsystems of an organization, such as mission, policies and procedures, training, and evaluation. Reviewing the current policies, procedures, and forms is one way to ensure that diversity issues are included in all aspects of an organization.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Conduct a full review of departmental policies and procedures to assess their impact on diverse populations and make changes as appropriate</li> </ul>

5. Recruitment and retention of a diverse staff	To have a truly multicultural department/division, it is essential that the staff be culturally diverse. Without a diversity of voices, life experiences, and cultural backgrounds, staff may be limited in their ability to meet the needs of some students. In addition to recruiting a diverse staff, addressing interpersonal and structural dynamics within the environment helps to create a welcoming and nurturing environment for all staff members.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Develop and follow proactive diversity recruitment strategies that identify where advertisements will be sent and how a diverse candidate pool will be developed</li> <li>• Include multicultural awareness, competence, knowledge, and skills as an integral part of the job description</li> <li>• Evaluate all job candidates on those criteria</li> <li>• Use ongoing supervision to explore retention-related issues</li> </ul>
6. Multicultural competency expectations and training	Multiculturally competent attitudes, knowledge, and skills are fast becoming the standard within student affairs by which staff members may be evaluated. It is no longer acceptable to have a multicultural expert on staff to meet the needs of specific student groups. 7. Scholarly activities	It is the responsibility of all professionals to contribute to the field of multiculturalism through professional writing or presentations that reflect on their experiences. Such work instills more commitment to the process, creates a positive image for the department/division, and provides opportunities for staff members to receive feedback and support from colleagues across the country.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Encourage, support, and reward staff members who pursue any multicultural scholarly activities (writing for publication or presenting at professional conferences)</li> </ul>
8. Departmental/division programs and services	Incorporating multicultural content and sensitivity into all programs and services, from advertisement to implementation, makes for accessible and meaningful activities. It is also helpful to identify underserved student groups and develop ways to meet their needs more effectively, including the development of new and creative programs and services.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Review all programs, activities, forms, and services for multicultural content and values</li> <li>• Develop plans for more thorough and deliberate infusion of diversity material in workshop agendas and materials</li> <li>• Create at least one new and innovative program each year to contribute to the multicultural change efforts on campus</li> </ul>

9. Physical environment	The physical environment sends an important message about what it values. It is important to create an affirming and caring environment where individuals of diverse backgrounds feel valued. Creating a setting that has music, artwork, and other visual images that are representative of diverse cultures not only makes those individuals feel welcome, it also educates and expands the awareness of others. Staff members need to be conscious and thoughtful in how they approach this issue; ongoing dialogue is central to creating an inclusive and accepting environment.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Review individual offices and public space to ensure they are void of offensive or insensitive materials</li> <li>• Ensure that all offices and programs are accessible and welcoming to students with disabilities</li> <li>• Display culturally inclusive artwork, music, and magazines in public spaces to create a welcoming environment</li> <li>• Discuss how to respond to insensitive or offensive verbal or nonverbal conduct in any programs or services</li> </ul>

10. Assessment	To create a multicultural department/division, an assessment of the multicultural strengths and weaknesses is necessary. By knowing who it is serving and how satisfied they are with the service, a department/division is better able to develop effective programs and services. Once an accurate evaluation has been completed, it is easier to set goals and plan strategically. Self-evaluation is not enough. It is vital to gather information about the perceptions, attitudes, and experiences of the students, staff, and faculty who use the services for a more accurate picture of the type of changes needed. The goal of assessment is ultimately to create some accountability for the multicultural change efforts.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Create an evaluation system that assesses the effectiveness of its services and outreach efforts to all students</li> <li>• Assess student satisfaction with the multicultural sensitivity of the service or outreach effort as well as the multicultural competence of the staff</li> <li>• Gather information about the demographic background of students who use any program or services</li> <li>• Set yearly goals to either increase the percentage of students from under-represented groups who use their office or improve the students' overall level of satisfaction with those services</li> </ul>

Part 1. MISSION

Multicultural Student Programs and Services (MSPS) must promote academic and personal growth of traditionally underserved students, work with the entire campus to create an institutional and community climate of justice, promote access and equity in higher education, and offer programs that educate the campus about diversity.

Multicultural Student Programs and Services (MSPS) must incorporate student learning and student development in its mission. MSPS must enhance overall educational experiences. MSPS must develop, record, disseminate, implement, and regularly review its mission and goals. Mission statements must be consistent with the mission and goals of the institution and with the standards in this document. MSPS must operate as an integral part of the institution's overall mission.

MSPS must assist the institution in developing shared goals and creating a sense of common community that serves all its constituents fairly and equitably and is marked by:

- access to academic, social, cultural, recreational and other groups and activities
- opportunities for intentional interaction and engagement
- integration

MSPS must encourage the institution to hold units responsible for meeting the needs of traditionally underserved students in their area of responsibility; this includes under-represented or oppressed students, such as students of color, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender students, and students with disabilities.

Institutions may have more than one MSPS organization. Each of these MSPS organizations' missions may address the needs of a particular student group or groups. These missions should be complementary. If only one MSPS organization exists, the mission should address the needs of students of the many cultural and oppressed groups.

In addition, MSPS should encourage all units to explicitly include in their mission serving a wide range of underserved students fairly and equitably.

Part 2: PROGRAM

The formal education of students consists of the curriculum and the co-curriculum, and must promote student learning and development that is purposeful and holistic. Multicultural Student Programs and Services (MSPS) must identify relevant and desirable student learning and development outcomes and provide programs and services that encourage the achievement of those outcomes.

Relevant and desirable outcomes include: intellectual growth, effective communication, realistic self-appraisal, enhanced self-esteem, clarified values, career choices, leadership development, healthy behaviors, meaningful interpersonal relationships, independence, collaboration, social responsibility, satisfying and productive lifestyles, appreciation of diversity, spiritual awareness, and achievement of personal and educational goals.

MSPS must provide evidence of its impact on the achievement of student learning and development outcomes.

A. What are the primary elements of the program?

B. What evidence exists that confirms the program contributes to student learning and development?

C. What evidence is available to confirm program goals' achievement?

Part 3: LEADERSHIP

Effective and ethical leadership is essential to the success of all organizations. Institutions must appoint, position, and empower Multicultural Student Programs and Services (MSPS) leaders within the administrative structure to accomplish stated missions. MSPS leaders at various levels must be selected on the basis of formal education and training, relevant work experience, personal skills and competencies, relevant professional credentials, as well as potential for promoting learning and development in students, applying effective practices to educational processes, and enhancing institutional effectiveness. Institutions must determine expectations of accountability for leaders and fairly assess their performance.

Leaders of MSPS must exercise authority over resources for which they are responsible to achieve their respective missions.

MSPS leaders must:

- articulate a vision for their organization
- set goals and objectives based on the needs and capabilities of the populations served
- promote student learning and development
- prescribe and practice ethical behavior
- recruit, select, supervise, and develop others in the organization
- manage financial resources
- coordinate human resources
- plan, budget for, and evaluate personnel and programs
- apply effective practices to educational and administrative processes
- communicate effectively
- initiate collaborative interaction between individuals and agencies that possess legitimate concerns and interests in the MSPS.

MSPS leaders must identify and find means to address individual, organizational, or environmental conditions that inhibit goal achievement.

MSPS leaders must promote campus environments that result in multiple opportunities for student learning and development.

MSPS leaders must continuously improve programs and services in response to changing needs of students and other constituents, and evolving institutional priorities.

Part 4: ORGANIZATION and MANAGEMENT

Guided by an overarching intent to ensure student learning and development, Multicultural Student Programs and Services (MSPS) must be structured purposefully and managed effectively to achieve stated goals. Evidence of appropriate structure must include current and accessible policies and procedures, written performance expectations for all employees, functional workflow graphics or organizational charts, and clearly stated service delivery expectations.

MSPS must provide channels within the organization for regular review of administrative policies and procedures.

MSPS must be located in an organizational structure that can best provide for effective programs and services for achievement of its mission.

Wherever located MSPS should collaborate and form close alliances with student affairs.

They should have insight into the interpersonal process of how one's own behavior impacts others. They should be aware of when change is necessary for the realization of a positive and just campus.

Professional staff must have knowledge about identity development and the intersections of various aspects of diversity (i.e., race and class, race and gender, race and sexual orientation) on identity development and the acculturation process. Professional staff must know how various groups experience the campus and what institutional and societal barriers limit their access and their success. Professional staff must know how culture affects verbal and non-verbal communication. Degree or credential-seeking interns must be qualified by enrollment in an appropriate field of study and by relevant experience. These individuals must be trained and supervised adequately by professional staff members holding educational credentials and related work experience appropriate for supervision.

The use of graduate assistants and interns should be encouraged to expand staff abilities, provide peer role models, and give valuable pre-professional experience. Particular attention should be given to preparing all pre-professional assistants to be especially sensitive to cultural differences of focus populations.

Students

Student employees and volunteers must be carefully selected, trained, supervised, and evaluated. They must be trained on how and when to refer those in need of assistance to qualified staff members and have access to a supervisor for assistance in making these judgments. Student employees and volunteers must be provided clear and precise job descriptions, pre-service training based on assessed needs, and continuing staff development.

Student employees and volunteers from multicultural groups should be utilized.

Student employees must be assigned responsibilities that are within their scope of competence.

Training and activities for student employees could include retreats, leadership classes, and workshops.

Support Staff

MSPS must have technical and support staff members adequate to accomplish its mission. ## Part 2: Program Overview Questions

A. What are the primary elements of the program?

MCSS is focused on three key areas: cultural competence, multicultural leadership, and ally-development.

B. What evidence exists that confirms the program contributes to student learning and development?

Both quantitative and qualitative means are used to measure learning and development. They include event evaluations, pre and post-tests, reflection papers and presentations.

C. What evidence is available to confirm program goals' achievement?

See answer above.

Part 3: Leadership Overview Questions

A. In what ways are program leaders qualified for their roles?

Both full-time staff members have earned master's degrees. In addition, both have participated in several institutes (e.g., Multicultural Awareness Institute, Coaching for Educational Equity Institute, Social Justice Training Institute) and professional development opportunities on a regular basis.

B. In what ways are program leaders positioned and empowered to accomplish the program mission?

There is some level of autonomy in the development and implementation of current and new programs. This freedom facilitates creative problem-solving and collaborative leadership. Within the division, there is great potential for sustained change. However, the multicultural center is not as well-positioned or empowered campuswide. Relationships with Admissions, Financial Aid, Academic Support Services, Alumni Relations, and Vice Provost can be improved to provide a comprehensive program that meets the needs of students.

C. How are program leaders accountable for their performance?

Full-time staff performance is evaluated semi-annually through formal performance reviews and informal dialogues with direct supervisors. Performance is evaluated based on essential job responsibilities as outlined in job descriptions, as well as agreed upon annual goals.

D. What leadership practices best describe program leaders?

Three strengths of both staff members are: commitment to social justice, collaborative leadership approaches, and student-centered work ethic.

4.4 Channels are in place for regular review of administrative policies and procedures.	ND 1 2 <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 3 4 NR

Part 4: Organization and Management Overview Questions

A. What are the institutional organizational structures that define, enable, or restrain the program?

Within the division, MCSS is positioned under the Student Development Team. This recognizes the cultural competence, leadership development, and ally-development concentrations of the multicultural center. However, because there is no centralized diversity council or structure for a comprehensive diversity program/strategic plan, the multicultural center is limited in its influence outside the division. The center would benefit from conversations with colleagues across campus that are focused on serving the needs of students of color and their allies.

B. What protocols or processes are in place to insure effective management of the program?

Regularly scheduled meetings are in place to insure effective management. In addition, the performance appraisal process and annual report contribute to the measurement of success.

Part 5: Human Resources Overview Questions

A. What is the strategic plan for staffing the program?

There are only two full-time staff members: Assistant Dean and Coordinator. The center is student staff heavy, employing a minimum of six student assistants and several student planning committees a year. There have been initial discussions regarding the strategic plan for staffing which includes the addition of a Director, Assistant Director, summer graduate assistant, and student interns. A planning initiative for the Council on Equity & Inclusion includes the expenses of a summer GA and next year the student staff will re-shift job responsibilities to increase internship opportunities for student leaders. The addition of a Director and/or Assistant Director would help the center run more efficiently and increase the programs and services for students. This would possibly include the management of the Creating Community Retreat, Allies training program, Creating Community Grant, alumni relations, and end-of-the-year celebrations.

B. In what ways are staff members' qualifications insured and their performance judged?

All staff members are hired after meeting required educational, professional, and job-appropriate qualifications as outlined on all job descriptions. Staff performance is judged on a regular basis via semi-annual performance reviews. In addition, full-time staff members review student job performance during bi-monthly meetings. Staff members are provided feedback based on accomplishment of agreed upon goals and essential job responsibilities. All staff members also provide a self-assessment of their job performance.

C. In what ways does the program train, supervise, and evaluate staff members?

All staff members participate in basic office manager training during their first day of work as part of their orientation process. They also receive an office manager guide that outlines MCSS information and procedures. Student staff members have also participated in professional development workshops sponsored by the Center for Information Technology (e.g., Collage, Dreamweaver) and other departments (e.g., resume writing, MBTI) during staff meetings. Professional staff members attend Arete workshops sponsored by HR and regional/national conferences (i.e., CaCCCHE retreats, NCORE) on an annual basis. Three student assistants are supervised by the Coordinator and the remaining staff, including the Coordinator, is supervised by the Assistant Dean. Supervision of all staff is a combination of management, mentorship, and coaching. Evaluations are based on self-assessments and performance reviews.

PART 6. FINANCIAL RESOURCES (Criterion Measures)	Rating Scale

6.1 The program has adequate funding to accomplish its mission and goals.	ND 1 <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 2 3 4 NR
6.2 Funding priorities are determined within the context of program mission, student needs, and available fiscal resources.	ND 1 <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 2 3 4 NR
6.3 The program demonstrates fiscal responsibility and cost effectiveness consistent with institutional protocols.	ND 1 2 <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 3 4 NR

Part 6: Financial Resources Overview Questions

A. What is the funding strategy for the program?

In the Division of University Life, a static operational budget is provided annually for each office with possible increase based on salary adjustments. However, department chairs may submit planning initiatives for programs, projects, and staffing requests that are estimated to cost $25,000 or over to the Vice President for University Life. Planning initiatives are due the fall prior to the academic year. After careful review of all submissions, the Vice President, Dean of Students, Associate Dean of Students, and Executive Director prioritize the initiatives and decide which will be pushed forward to the senior University Leadership, which will be funded internally, and which will be kept on the list for future consideration.

The Multicultural Student Services operational budget (excluding full-time and student salaries) is $29,914.00. This pays for programming, professional development, professional association dues, office supplies, and daily operations. In addition, MCSS oversees the Creating Community Grant, which has a budget of $10,000.00. This grant is intended to pay for students and faculty who are seeking funding for events that support multiculturalism and cultural competence. The grant does not pay for the entire event and co-sponsorship is required. Individuals and groups may apply for up to $500 to help pay for the event.

B. What evidence exists to confirm fiscal responsibility and cost-effectiveness?

Budget and expense reports reflect fiscal responsibility. In addition, three graduation ceremonies: API Graduation, Latino Recognition Ceremony, and Vizuri Kabisa are currently planned by student leaders and funded by the Creating Community Grant. Unfortunately, MCSS does not have enough money to pay for these three out of the departmental budget so the ceremonies are paid for by the grant. This is due in large part because a bulk of the MCSS budget is allocated for the two-day Creating Community Retreat. A strategic initiative was submitted that includes the expenses of this retreat, thereby releasing these funds for their intended use and providing additional funding for existing MCSS programs.

Part 7: Facilities, Technology, and Equipment Overview Questions

A. How are facilities, technology, and equipment inventoried and maintained?

Computer equipment, technology, and office equipment are monitored on an annual basis. The Multicultural Center recently relocated to bring all offices and the lounge in one location.

B. What evidence exists to confirm facilities, technology, and equipment access, health, safety, and security for all who are served by the program?

Little has been done to confirm the access, health, safety, and security. The only time this is done is with the arrival of new office furniture and equipment. This is an area where MCSS can improve a great deal.

Part 8: Legal Responsibilities Overview Questions

A. What are the crucial legal issues faced by the program?

Legal issues include confidentiality of student information (e.g., student ID numbers) and non-discrimination policies and procedures.

B. How are staff members instructed, advised, or assisted with legal concerns?

Professional staff members participate in Arete training that addresses these issues. Student assistants, however, do not. Again, this is another area for serious improvement.

Part 9: Equity and Access Overview Questions

A. How does the program insure non-discriminatory, fair, and equitable treatment to all constituents?

MCSS staff members attempt to create safe and inviting spaces for all community members. In addition, Allies magnets are displayed in the office as visible signs of safe zones. Comments and concerns are always welcomed but we have not done as great of a job in communicating that to students.

B. What policies and/or practices are in place to address imbalances in participation among selected categories of students and imbalances in staffing patterns among selected categories of staff members?

There are several practices in place. In the recruitment and hiring processes, there are concerted efforts to hire staff members who reflect the diverse backgrounds of students. This includes ethnic, sexual orientation, faith tradition, SES, and national origin dimensions. The center struggles in recruiting male students. There is one male professional staff member and one male student assistant in a staff of ten, excluding student planning committees (although those numbers are low, as well). In addition, staff members serve as liaisons between culturally-focused clubs and/or programs to promote communication and collaboration. Professional staff members have outreached to student groups that have not had strong connections with MCSS (e.g., Indian Student Organization) while maintaining strong relationships with those who are already connected (e.g., Black Student Union).

10.3 The program works to increase the retention of the underserved population.	ND 1 2 3 <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 4 NR

Part 10: Campus and External Relations Overview Questions

A. With which relevant individuals, groups, campus offices, and external agencies must the program maintain effectively relations?

Relevant relationships outside the division include: Vice Provost, Multicultural Recruitment & Retention, Learning & Writing Center, Financial Aid, Alumni Relations, Office of Living-Learning Communities, Sociology, Office of Service-Learning and Community Actions, and Retention Committee. Within the division, relationships include culturally-focused clubs and all departments. These relationships are based on information provided by Daryl Smith and Associates (1997), who outline four dimensions of campus diversity:

- 1) representation – recruitment, retention, and graduation of historically underrepresented and underserved populations,
- 2) climate and intergroup relations – impact of living and learning environments on student and university success,
- 3) education and scholarship – diverse perspectives in the curriculum, pedagogy, and scholarship, and
- 4) institutional transformation – embedded university commitments (e.g., mission statement, policies) and leadership practices that support diversity.

Based on their argument, exceptional programs and goals that support diversity go beyond tracking demographic shifts and supporting only students of color. In other words, intercultural engagement, curriculum development and organizational culture are equally important.

B. What evidence confirms effective relationships with program constituents?

Most of these relationships are reflected in co-sponsored events and programs.

This is reflected in the programs, training, and the interpersonal relationships with students and colleagues alike.

Part 12: Ethics Overview Questions

A. What ethical principles, standards, statements, or codes guide the program and its staff members?

The university's vision, mission, and core values are manifested in MCSS programs. The center is also guided by the UL Commitments. Standards include CAS and multicultural competencies as outlined by Pope, Reynolds, and Mueller. All staff members follow codes of conduct as outlined in the student and employee handbooks.

B. What is the program's strategy for managing student and staff member confidentiality issues?

Confidentiality as a community agreement is included in all retreats and one-on-one meetings. In addition, closed meetings are announced as such prior to the meeting. Confidentiality is only broken when the individual is hurting self, others, or is being hurt.

C. How are ethical dilemmas and conflicts of interest managed?

Conflicts are not viewed as negative events but as ways to develop creative solutions and approaches. Professional staff model addressing conflict directly and respectfully with individuals or parties involved when it arises. At times outside mediators/facilitators are involved when the two parties are students. Student assistants and volunteers are also encouraged to ask the Assistant Dean and/or Coordinator when they unsure of how to handle unethical dilemmas within MCSS.

D. In what ways are staff members informed and supervised regarding ethical conduct?

Ethical conduct and professional behavior are introduced and discussed during the staff orientation process, during staff retreats, and during staff meetings. They are also discussed during informal conversations with students and colleagues. When supervisors witness or hear of unethical or unprofessional conduct, it is immediately brought to the attention of the staff member. Both the staff member and the supervisor then discuss whether the behavior was unethical ways and next steps to avoid or interrupt the behavior. In addition, students and staff receive positive feedback and affirmation when they demonstrate ethical and professional behavior as well.

Part 13: Assessment and Evaluation Overview Questions

A. What is the grand assessment strategy for the program?

Assessment is conducted by measuring student learning outcomes and program outcomes. These are included in divisional and departmental strategic plans, as well.

B. How are tangible, measurable outcomes determined to ensure program mission and goal achievement?

MCSS submits 3-5 goals a year that are realistic, appropriate, and based on evaluations/feedback. Individual goals may or may not reflect the department goals and are based primarily on growth and development of the staff member.

C. How are student learning and development outcomes determined to ensure their level of achievement?

SLOs are shaped by the program goals (e.g., SJEP objectives) and feedback from students regarding their own personal/leadership/cultural competence development. Previous student participants and leaders are also critical in the development of the goals as they provide valuable feedback and suggestions in the development and implementation of programs.

Multicultural Student Services Budget

In the Division of University Life, a static operational budget is provided annually for each office with possible increase based on salary adjustments. However, department chairs may submit planning initiatives for programs, projects, and staffing requests that are estimated to cost $25,000 or over to the Vice President for University Life. Planning initiatives are due the fall prior to the academic year. After careful review of all submissions, the Vice President, Dean of Students, Associate Dean of Students, and Executive Director prioritize the initiatives and decide which will be pushed forward to the senior University Leadership, which will be funded internally, and which will be kept on the list for future consideration.

The Multicultural Student Services operational budget (excluding full-time and student salaries) is $29,914.00. This pays for programming, professional development, professional association dues, office supplies, and daily operations. In addition, MCSS oversees the Creating Community Grant, which has a budget of $10,000.00. This grant is intended to pay for students and faculty who are seeking funding for events that support multiculturalism and cultural competence. The grant does not pay for the entire event and co-sponsorship is required. Individuals and groups may apply for up to $500 to help pay for the event.

The following programs are funded by MCSS:

- Creating Community Retreat – This retreat is co-sponsored by the Office of Residence Life and Student Leadership & Engagement. Approximately 150 resident advisors, orientation team members, and student government officers participate. All costs for this program, including facilitators, meals, and office supplies are paid for by MCSS. A planning initiative was put forward this year to request divisional funding rather than departmental funding to pay for this two-day retreat. Internal divisional funding will be granted next academic year. However, there are no guaranteed divisional funds for subsequent years. Department chairs will brainstorm possible solutions for future retreats.
- Semester Programs – Two semester-long programs are also funded by the operational budget: Storytelling to Engage Multiculturalism (StEM) and Social Justice Educators Program (SJEP). In addition to copies and intern stipends, the bulk of the expenses are the weekly dinners.
- Annual events – The Welcome Back Reception and Graduate Luncheon for Students of Color are also paid for by MCSS. In an effort to consolidate funding, resources, and efforts, MCSS staff members have co-sponsored these events. Welcome Back Reception is planned in partnership with Multicultural Recruitment & Retention, Foreword Summer Bridge Program, and at times the Vice Provost. The Graduate Luncheon is developed in collaboration with Career Services Center, with occasional funding from the Vice Provost.
- New Program – In an effort to promote intercampus collaboration, a hip hop program was planned by MCSS and Mills College in the spring. This year's event was hosted at Mills and the bulk of the costs were incurred by them. Next year's event will be at USF and we will pay for the majority of the costs.
- Professional Development – University Life does not have a pool for professional development funds within the division. Therefore, all Assistant Deans and Directors are encouraged to use their departmental monies to fund one national conference and one regional conference every year. Second-in-commands (i.e., Assistant Directors, Coordinators) are encouraged to attend one regional conference. In MCSS, both the Assistant Dean and Coordinator receive funding to attend one national conference and one regional conference. However, due to the lack of funding, staff members have also paid for conference and professional association expenses (e.g., lodging, registration fees, airfare) out-of-pocket – despite the fact that they may be presenting workshops or are officers of associations. The division is currently conducting an internal review of all professional development expenses to avoid this practice and encourage professional development of all directors and second-in-commands in one national and one regional conference a year.

- Professional Associations – Staff members currently pay dues to the California Council of Cultural Centers in Higher Education (CaCCCHE), the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (NASPA), and the National Clearinghouse for Leadership Programs.

There are three additional programs that are coordinated by MCSS. However, their operational costs are not funded by the departmental budget:

- End-of-the-Year Celebrations (EYCs) – Three graduation ceremonies: API Graduation, Latino Recognition Ceremony, and Vizuri Kabisa are currently planned by student leaders and funded by the Creating Community Grant. Unfortunately, MCSS does not have enough money to pay for these three out of the departmental budget so the ceremonies are paid for by the grant. This is due in large part because a bulk of the MCSS budget is allocated for the two-day Creating Community Retreat. Because the retreat will be funded by the division next year, this will allow us to pay for the EYCs out of the MCSS budget, thereby releasing these funds for their intended use.
- Esther Madriz Diversity Scholar (EMDS) – This living-learning program is in collaboration with the Sociology department. All operational costs are paid for by designated budgets from both University Life and the College of Arts & Sciences. Therefore, this has no financial impact on the MCSS budget.
- Council on Equity & Inclusion (CEI) – The Assistant Dean currently chairs the division's Council on Equity & Inclusion. With the exception of this year's Creating Community Retreat, all of this year's and next year's expenses are paid for by the division.

There are two main priorities for the MCSS budget: staffing and the development of a Multicultural Center.

- Staffing – There are currently only two full-time staff members in the department: the Assistant Dean and Coordinator. MCSS used to be combined with International Student Services (ISS) until 2003. When the split occurred, ISS retained the Assistant Director, Administrative Assistant, and Graduate Assistant positions to help with immigration administration. MCSS received the majority of the programming budget and one GA. In 2005, the division decided to internally fund three Coordinator positions for MCSS, Health Promotion Services, and Judicial Affairs by collapsing the funding for five GAs in the division, including the ones in ISS and MCSS. At present, the majority of MCSS staffing consists of student assistants. Given the growth of the department's programs, the division's strategic priorities, and the anticipated recruitment numbers, it is imperative to increase the staff to include at least one other full-time staff member – preferably a Director and/or Assistant Director. Discussions are underway to fund an Administrative Assistant position that would be shared by MCSS and several offices.

- Multicultural Center – With the new space in UC 429, the staff envision moving towards a multicultural center model. This includes a shift in language, resources, staffing, and space design. Discussions with Development and UL leadership will take place in the near future to discuss the implications and considerations of this shift.

As a student she was an active member of the Ethnic Student Center and developed a strong reputation on campus as a student leader in promoting diversity and social justice issues. Her work as an activist was not just an extra-curricular activity; it became her life's passion and ultimately her career.

Ms. Yi-Baker received a MS degree from Colorado State University in Student Affairs in Higher Education and currently works as the Director of MOSAIC Cross Cultural Center at San Jose State University where she is dedicated to enhancing and advocating for the academic and cultural empowerment of historically under-represented students. She has served as a Diversity consultant and trainer for the past 10 years and has worked with numerous campuses including UC Davis, CSU Monterey Bay, Cal Poly Pomona, and California Lutheran University, just to name a few.

Ms. Yi-Baker is an Executive Board member of the California Council of Cultural Centers in Higher Education (CaCCCHE) and is also a member of the National Coalition Building Institute, a non-profit organization dedicated to ending discrimination and intolerance of every kind. In addition, she is a board member for the Michael Lee Environmental Foundation where they strive to provide examples of environmental integrity and public awareness through action and education. She is the recipient of the 2001 Western Association of College and University Housing Officers (WACUHO) Diversity Institutional award for her efforts in coordinating a month long program called Diversity Days.

In her spare time, she loves cooking, reading, and most of all spending time with friends and family especially her nieces and nephews that live in southern California. One of her biggest accomplishment was crossing the finish line at the 1999 San Diego Rock 'n Roll marathon. She currently resides in San Jose, California with her husband.

Description of Program

Drawing upon the examples set by the late Professor Esther Madriz, for whom this living-learning community is named after, and central to the mission of the Esther Madriz Diversity Scholars (EMDS) of the University of San Francisco is the metaphorical and real life practice of “crossing borders, discovering home” (EMDS’ annual theme). Students are encouraged to consider borders as liminal spaces where learning, growth, and reflection can occur.

EMDS began Fall 2005 as a collaborative project between Sociology and Multicultural Students Services (MCSS). Prior to 2005, the living-learning community was known as Phelan Multicultural Community (PMC). Students in the community took two different classes a semester taught by two different faculty in (sometimes) two different disciplines. In other words, students could theoretically take Philosophy of Race one semester and African American Culture & Experience another. At that time, extra-curricular experiences were coordinated by a hall director. Planning was done in isolation so that professors were unaware of community issues and extracurricular workshops in the residence hall, and the hall director was uninformed of course materials and lesson plans.

Then, in Spring 2005 two synergistic forces collided. Dr. Stephanie Sears, Assistant Professor of Sociology, envisioned her home department “adopting” the program while University Life (“Student Affairs” division at USF) imagined a senior-level administrator taking on the role of developing and implementing a co-curricular program in collaboration with the College of Arts & Sciences. Ms. Mary Grace Almandrez, Assistant Dean for MCSS, was asked to take on this role and join forces with Dr. Sears.

After hearing the challenges and rewards of taking on this community from their respective colleagues, the two began to dream of a comprehensive approach to social justice education where theory, practice, and reflection were blended, interconnected, and often time seamless. Their first task was to determine how to garner institutional buy-in. Dr. Sears, with assistance from Sociology colleagues, submitted a proposal that would allow Sociology to: “house” the living-learning program under a new name (resulting in a rotation of select faculty to teach with the incentive of course release), partner with MCSS, have administrative support for operations, and have its own programming budget. The proposal was accepted by the Dean of Arts & Sciences. On the University Life end, the program responsibilities were added to the Assistant Dean for MCSS’ job description to ensure consistent staffing and accountability. Both Professor Sears and Dean Almandrez, with support from their divisions, felt their strategic and intentional partnership would keep the program alive and thriving.

The next step was to develop a transformative educational experience that would challenge students academically and developmentally. Professor Sears and Dean Almandrez wanted the sophomores and juniors in the living-learning community to connect theoretical frameworks, intellectual discourse, and experiential learning with identity development and personal growth (Learning Reconsidered, 2004). Therefore, they moved to a pedagogical model where students interfaced with various co-educators:

- EMDS begin the academic year with a weekend retreat, which is co-facilitated by the Sociology professor, Assistant Dean for MCSS, Resident Minister (staff member from University Ministry) and Resident Advisor (student paraprofessional). During the retreat, the scholars are oriented to the program and start forming relationships.
- Social Problems in the fall and Community Organizing in the spring are now team-taught by a professor of Sociology as well the Assistant Dean for Multicultural Student Services. Embedded in the fall and spring courses are an identity development curriculum and leadership curriculum, respectively.
- Students attend weekly community gatherings, or karamus, that are facilitated primarily by the Resident Minister and Resident Advisor. These staff also provide a support network for the scholars and help them navigate how to live and learn as individuals within community.
- In January, the community participates in a transborder experience (similar to a loosely defined “immersion”) that allows scholars to: (1) gain a global perspective on national social problems and their solutions, (2) connect Social Problems coursework with Community Organizing, and (3) learn from a diversity of activists (e.g., scholars, student leaders, community activists, and faith-based organizations) about how to work as allies, as well as how to utilize various social change strategies to hopefully practice at USF. Previous trips were in San Diego, CA & Tijuana, Mexico; and New York, NY & San Juan, Puerto Rico. Next year’s trip will take place north and south of the Mason-Dixon Line.
- As part of their living-learning commitment, students complete thirty hours of service-learning to observe and experience the connections between community organizing and social justice. Administrators at the service site are invited to provide input and evaluations that may have an impact on students’ service-learning grades.
- Throughout the year, scholars attend monthly Smart Activism workshops, sponsored by the McCarthy Center for Public Service and the Common Good, Lane Center for Catholic Social Thought, and Office of Living-Learning Communities. These workshops are centered on the Circle of Praxis: immersion, social analysis, reflection, and thoughtful action.

All of these elements are included in a community agreement form signed by students at the beginning of the semester as well as the syllabi to ensure that students are aware of and accountable for interfacing with these various co-educators. In other words, their participation with these various groups and individuals are required (with the exception of the transborder experience) and can affect their overall class grade.

The success of the program is due in large part to the collegial relationship between the Sociology professors who teach in the program and the Assistant Dean for Multicultural Student Services. Because both parties are considered co-educators in this model, both perspectives are incorporated in the curricular and co-curricular aspects of the program. Co-educators act as a team, then, who plans everything – from the fall retreat to the course materials – together. Now, professors discuss residential living and community issues with University Life staff and staff receive information on lesson plans to organize community development activities that complement in-class learning.

This team approach also requires continuous and honest dialogue. Monthly meetings with the support team (i.e., Assistant Dean, Professor, Resident Minister, RA, and Hall Director), regular e-mail communication, and monthly meetings with the Director for the Office of Living-Learning Communities assure information is circulated among all involved. In addition, the support team keeps each other abreast of changes from respective departments that may have an impact on the program. This allows for realistic visioning and planning. The relationship is also one that is respectful and empathetic – particularly around issues of time commitments. Even with the tremendous amount of time it takes to develop and implement such an innovative program, the team is mindful of making sure life off-campus is considered. For example, sensitivity to family responsibilities and University duties are taken into account when scheduling class times, community gatherings, meetings, and transborder dates.

A fourth component of the academic and student affairs relationship is institutional support. Human, administrative, and financial resources have been allocated to EMDS beyond the professor and assistant dean. Resident Ministers devote fifteen hours each week and RAs give ten hours per week to design and deliver co-curricular experiences. The Office of Living-Learning Communities (reporting to Arts & Sciences with a strong dotted line to University Life) also provides support in projects such as recruitment efforts and assessment strategies. It is clearly a community effort that makes EMDS what it is today.

Given the various characteristics of this relationship, two key learnings have stood out: Professors and staff alike honor and appreciate one another's disciplines, experiences, and backgrounds. There is no hierarchy of knowledge. Rather, everyone's experiences are valued. While the program is the focus of the partnership, the team is also committed to one another. Meaningful interactions have cultivated an alliance that will remain intact after individuals are no longer a part of the program.

Mission and Goals of Program

Through integrated learning experiences, students explore the idea of “crossing borders, discovering home” to become scholar-activists for social change.

The general learning goals for the program are:

- Develop a deeper understanding of their individual and group identities
- Demonstrate knowledge of how sociologists define, study, and analyze “social problems”, community organizing and social change
- Identify the knowledge, skills, and abilities required to be effective agents of social change
- Gain a greater sense of civic and ethical responsibility, and of how to act on this effectually

The Social Justice Educators Program 2006

Process-Content Outline

The Goal

The goal of the program sequence is to develop participant knowledge and skill as potential, and then practicing, facilitators of Facilitated Dialogues. This experience addresses multiple identities and highlight interactions among and comparisons between multiple identities. The program also address patterns and theories of small group interaction, facilitation techniques, and concepts of social identity, social justice, and intercultural communication. Each of these topics and foci builds facilitator knowledge and skill. Together they provide a rich toolkit for facilitating dialogue and other experiential education addressing social identity and social justice.

The program is experiential. Participant experience is structured to maximize learning through group interaction, conflict surfacing and de-escalation, immediate and reflective group processing, in-class participant co-facilitation, and meta-processing by instructors. Participants' life experience and participants' experience in this program are essential components of SJEP. Experience serves to illustrate and integrate the concepts outlined above and to build participant co-facilitation confidence and competence throughout the program .

Balancing the focus on Social Identity, Social Justice, and Co-Facilitation

One way to categorize the process and content of the program divides the material into three categories: social identity, social justice, and co-facilitation. While most elements of the program addresses all three of these categories to some degree, this distinction helps illustrate the relative importance of various readings, assignments, and in-class activities at different stages in the semester.

For purposes of this illustration, the 'social identity' category focuses on the exploration of multiple social identities, theories of social identity development, and socialization. The 'social justice' category focuses on power and privilege, target (subordinated) and agent (dominant) social groups. The 'co-facilitation' category focuses on group dynamics, facilitation techniques and processes.

SJEP begins with a greater emphasis on social identity and social justice, gradually introducing more and more process and content about co-facilitation. Participants come to Training with various levels of awareness about their own multiple social identities and various levels of exposure to experiential social justice education. This initial focus on social identity and social justice helps create a common base of understanding among participants on these important topics. As the semester progresses, more and more material on co-facilitation is introduced in preparation for co-facilitation outside of the program experience.

Process-Content Outline for Social Justice Educators Program

The goals of this program are to develop participants' knowledge and skills as potential facilitators of facilitated dialogues. As such, the experience builds upon, but does not replicate, the principles and content of facilitated dialogues themselves.

The program will focus on:

1. a grounded understanding of facilitated dialogue and dialogic processes,
2. increased understanding of social justice principles such as social identity, privilege and oppression, power and conflict,
3. facilitation skills and competencies, and
4. explorations of the roles of social justice education and advocacy.

Terminology:

Large group: the entire training class

Subgroups: smaller groups led by 1 or more facilitators.

Dyads: two individuals

Coaching groups: the individuals assigned to the same instructor/coach

I believe in the recognition of devices as devices--but I also believe in the reality of those devices. In one century men choose to hide their conquests under religion, in another under race. So you and I may recognize the fraudulence of the device in both cases, but the fact remains that a man who has a sword run through him because he will not become a Moslem or a Christian--or who is lynched in Mississippi or Zatembe because he is black--is suffering the utter reality of that device of conquest. And it is pointless to pretend that it doesn't exist--merely because it is a lie... (Lorraine Hansberry).

Course Description

Sociology is a science that seeks to understand the different processes by which individuals, groups, and institutions interact to shape our lives. In this class, we will first and foremost develop what's called a "sociological imagination" (a phrase coined by sociologist C. Wright Mills). The sociological imagination is not just the ability to memorize interesting facts or theoretical ideas about the world; rather, it's a way of approaching the world around us that allows us to think about how things are, why things are the way they are, and how things could be different. In this course, we will put our sociological imagination to use to explore how social problems are socially defined, patterned, contested, and resolved in complex societies.

Specifically we will examine “race” as a social problem in American society. Racial inequality remains a major characteristic of the United States. However, the nature of racial hierarchies has shifted. The course is designed to provide you with a solid sociological foundation in the theoretical perspectives and current debates regarding race in American society. We will concentrate primarily on the African American experience, always considering the ways in which this experience both illuminates and conceals the experiences of differently racialized groups as well as expands/ narrows our sociological understanding of race.

To fully examine these issues this course is designed with an alternative pedagogy at its core--that of service learning. Service learning is defined as an “educational experience in which students (a) participate in an organized service activity that meets community needs and (b) reflect on the service activity in such a way as to gain further understanding of course content, a broader appreciation of the discipline, and an enhanced sense of civic responsibility” (Bringle and Hatcher, 1995). Through the experience of interaction and reflection, we will learn to apply knowledge and skills in the real world, exercise critical thinking, develop self-learning and helping skills, develop societal knowledge and sensitivity, and enhance personal development.

The course fulfills Core Area E (Social Science) and Cultural Diversity (CD) requirements.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:

- ◆ Demonstrate knowledge of how sociologists define, study, and analyze social problems through exams and papers.
- ◆ Demonstrate knowledge of how sociologists define, study and analyze race through in class discussion, exams, integration and term papers.
- ◆ Develop an understanding of racial stratification as a real and tangible phenomenon that differently creates barriers and opportunities that affect life chances via the service learning journal and integration papers.
- ◆ Develop an understanding of race and racial politics in order to be intellectually and psychologically prepared for hands-on learning with individuals and organizations engaging in race politics via the service learning experience, journal, integration papers and exams.

- ◆ Draw upon their service with a community partner to interrelate causes and pose potential solutions to social problems through the development and completion of papers.
- ◆ Demonstrate an awareness of the interlocking nature of race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality and class via exams and service integration papers.
- ◆ Develop a greater understanding of human agency and recognize the significance of their contribution to community via the service learning journal and integration papers.

Service-Learning

Your activities as a service-learning student are intended to put the University’s mission to serve the larger community into action. In this capacity you are expected to provide direct service as needed by the community partner as well as act as a participant researcher, gathering data to help inform your understanding of the causes and consequences of social problems. The primary goal of your service experience in the wider community is to bring to life social problems such that, your practice will inform your ideas and your ideas will inform your practice. We will integrate the field experience with the course curriculum through such methods as directed readings, reflective writing, group discussion, and guest speakers.

The service-learning component of this course is mandatory. Your grade in the course will reflect the fulfillment of your service learning obligations as well as your integration of your service learning experience with course material. The service-learning component requires that you complete a minimum of 20 hours (approx 2 hours per week) of service with our designated community partner. Although you will be logging service-learning hours this semester, you will receive Service Learning credit upon completion of your total service learning hours at the end of second semester.

This semester our community learning partner will be _____. Beacon _____. It is important to remember that the staff and students at the Beacon serve as co-educators in your Esther Madriz experience. To facilitate this relationship you are to sign in and obtain your supervisor’s signature regarding your on site hours. In addition, Beacon staff will complete a midterm and final evaluation of your SL activities. Finally the your presentations and final papers will be shared with our community partner to ensure that the learning objectives were achieved. While serving at the community based agency, you will be expected to act in a responsible manner. You must keep scheduled work hours and complete assigned duties. You also are expected to maintain good working relationships with supervisors and peers. Conduct that is deemed unacceptable to the agency supervisor may result in you being dismissed from that placement and from the two–hour service-learning component of the course. Failure to complete the service learning component may result in a failing grade for the course. If this is a problem for you, you must see us as soon as possible.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

There are three required texts for this course, available at the USF Bookstore. There is also a required packet of readings available online and on 2 hr. reserve in the library.

1. Johnson, Allan. 2005. Privilege, Power and Difference. Boston, MA: McGraw Hill.
2. Tatum, Beverly. 2003. Why Are All the Black Kids Sitting Together in the Cafeteria? New York: Basic Books.
3. Omi and Winant. 1994. Racial Formation in the United States
4. Reading Packet

Course Requirements

Participation (includes Karamus & Reading Memos)	100 pts	20%
Integration Papers (2)	100pts (2x50)	20%
Quizzes (2)	100pts (2x50)	20%
Final Paper	100pts	20%
Service Learning Hrs + Journal	100pts	20%

There are several types of assignments you'll be asked to complete this semester. You cannot successfully complete this course without pursuing all of them.

1. Participation and Attendance (100 pts)

Our philosophy of the teaching/learning experience is an interactive one. This is your class. We expect each of you to contribute to this experience by coming to class prepared by having already read the required reading and through active discussion. This requires that you not only read the material, but that you also interact with the reading. We will NOT be feeding you facts that you will then regurgitate. Instead, ideas will be presented and we will ALL challenge ourselves to think critically about these ideas. The format of this class includes some lecture, a lot of discussion, “activities”, writing assignments, and exams. It is also important that you enroll into this course on Blackboard and have an active USF email account. All assignments and announcements will be posted on Blackboard.

Obviously one must attend class to participate. Unexcused absences and tardies will result in a reduction of participation points. More than FIVE unexcused absences in this class (which includes the weekly karamu meetings, and Smart Activism workshops, will automatically result in a failing grade. Students are responsible for all information provided in lectures, discussions, videos, guest speakers, handouts and required reading material. If you have to miss class, we strongly encourage you to borrow notes from one of your classmates.

Reading Memos: To help insure that Tuesday discussions are informed and productive, students will be expected to complete all assigned readings before class, and to prepare a brief written reading memo. Reading memos are assigned because they help students remember the general content of the readings and allow us to gauge your completion, comprehension and assessment of the readings. Reading memos have three parts. First write a short summary paragraph for each assigned reading that identifies the 3 – 5 main points from the reading. Second, write a short reflective paragraph that connects the reading to other course materials and your own informed academic perspective. Third list or describe at least one question, criticism, and/or reaction to the readings. Two students will be asked to share their memos each Tuesday.

2. Integration Papers (100 pts)

“Integration papers” are 5-7 page essays that bring together the readings from the text (and possibly the classroom discussion) with what you are observing, experiencing and learning from your community and service learning experiences as noted in your journal entries. A handout describing the 5-7 page assignments will be posted on Blackboard. All papers must be typed (12 point font), double spaced, with one-inch margins. Each integration paper will count for 10% of your overall grade.

3. Quizzes (100 pts)

There will be two quizzes for this class. They will consist of definitions, short answer, and essay questions that draw upon issues explored in the readings, class discussions and service learning experience. Each quiz will count for 10% of your overall grade. No early quizzes will be permitted.

4. Final Paper (100 pts)

You will also be responsible for a research paper that examines the way (s) race impacts a community served by our community partner. A detailed outline of the requirements for the 12-15 page paper will be posted on Blackboard. As part of this assignment, each student will create and present a ten minute poster presentation of their research project. Each student should make an appointment or come by my office hours to discuss the topic of her or his paper. This paper and the poster presentation will count towards 20% of your course grade.

5. Service-Learning Hours & Journal (100 pts)

The service-learning component requires that you complete a minimum of 20 hours (approx 2 hours per week) of service with a designated community partner. Students will keep an ongoing three part journal that (a) describes what happened at the service experience (b) analyzes how the course content relates to the service experience and (c) applies the course material and service material to your personal life. A handout detailing the journal guidelines will be posted on Blackboard. You also will maintain a service log that documents your hours which will be signed by the on site supervisor. Service-Learning hours and the journal will contribute to 20% of your course grade.

Course Evaluation Criteria:

We know that on occasion, it's difficult to figure out what professors expect of you in order to EARN a particular grade. In order to assuage that concern, here is the set of expectations we have of you during this semester; please note that they are not listed in order of importance:

- Consistent attendance in class sessions, with you having read the materials, come prepared to discuss the materials, and come prepared to pose any questions that you have;

- Attendance in our office hours whenever you have a question or need help in understanding the materials or issues under discussion;
- Professional and respectful service with the community partner.
- Thoughtful reflection on the course materials and issues in your written assignments;
- The diligent pursuit of all assignments, with you committed to doing your best work on each one;

You will be evaluated in relation to a pre-established standard based on the grading scale below. This means that we will not grade on a curve.

Grade	%	Points		Grade	%	Points
A+	100-97	500-485		C+	79-77	399-385
A	96-93	484-465		C	76-73	384-365
A-	92-90	464-450		C-	72-70	364-350
B+	89-87	449-435		D+	69-67	349-335
B	86-83	434-415		D	66-63	334-315
B-	82-80	414-400		D-	62-60	314-300

Only a verifiable emergency will be considered as a valid excuse for not turning in an assignment or taking an exam on the assigned date. If an emergency arises and you must miss an exam or turn in an assignment late, you MUST contact us on or before that day by calling our office phones. If we are out of the office, be sure to leave a message on the voicemail, including a number where you can be reached. Be sure to keep an extra copy of all assignments in case the copy meant for us gets lost! Late assignments will be penalized! They will be marked down to the next lowest grade (e.g., from A to A-, A- to B+, etc.) for each day past the due date, including non-class days and weekends.

We know that you have other courses, wage-earning, and other responsibilities that you have to attend to, and we are sympathetic to the various pulls on your time. However, you should note that we take very seriously what you do in this course, and we expect that your continued presence in this course will mean that you too take that seriously. Failure to attend to your responsibilities in this course will result in your failure in this class.

Academic Dishonesty

Although we do not expect anyone to do so, we must remind you that absolutely NO form of academic dishonesty (defined as the use of prohibited materials during an examination and the representation of another's work as your own whether the work was purchased or freely offered), will not be tolerated in this course. Any act of academic dishonesty will be met with an immediate failure on the assignment and handed over immediately to university administration for charges of academic misconduct. We will discuss how to avoid plagiarism; for additional details, see your student handbook.

Course Description

How does social change happen? What do we need to know to be effective change agents? Community organizing can build alliances and coalitions to address local, regional, state and even national and global issues of shared concern. When done collectively and strategically, it can alter power relations and change the conditions and circumstances that shape people's lives. Through a combination of practical experiences in a community based organization, readings that address activism and social change, and in-class reflection and discussion, this course brings together theory and practice to offer students an opportunity to learn how to become effective agents of social change. During our student-led seminar meetings, we will discuss 8 different types of activism as well as discuss case studies of grassroots organizing to gain a stronger understanding of relations of power, oppression and empowerment. In addition to the readings, guest speakers and group discussions, a major component of this course is the mandatory service-learning. Over the course of the semester, students will spend 2 hours per week working at Seven Tepees Youth Program, gathering information on local San Francisco communities, examining community issues, observing organizing strategies, and developing action plans. The course culminates with a student created social change project geared toward supporting Seven Tepees' efforts in the San Francisco community.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:

- ◆ Demonstrate knowledge of how sociologists define, study, and analyze activism and social change through assigned readings, class discussion, papers and the social change project.
- ◆ Identify and critique the multiple and varied strategies people use to implement social change through in class discussion, papers and the social change projects.
- ◆ Find, gather and interpret qualitative and quantitative information about communities and community organizations through papers and social action project.
- ◆ Draw upon their service with a community partner to draft a community action proposal that examines the interrelated causes and pose potential solutions to social problems.
- ◆ Demonstrate an awareness of social and cultural issues, including considerations of race, ethnicity, class, gender, and sexuality via in class discussion, papers and social action projects.
- ◆ Develop a greater understanding of human agency and recognize the significance of their contribution to community via the service-learning, reflection portfolio and community projects.
- ◆ Engage and assess their role as an active citizen through participation in community organizations and the social change project.

Service-learning at Seven Tepees

A major component of this course is your service-learning. Your service-learning activities are intended to put the University's mission to serve the larger community into action. In this capacity you are expected to provide direct service as needed by Seven Tepees as well as act as a participant researcher, gathering data to help inform your understanding of the causes and consequences of social problems, activism, and social change. The primary goal of your service experience in the wider community is to bring to life activism such that, your practice will inform your ideas and your ideas will inform your practice. During the semester, you will be providing assistance (broadly defined) to community residents through your service-learning and creating a project or product with Seven Tepees. The nature of your project or product is a direct result of your work with Seven Tepees and reflects the needs of the organization, your learning, and creativity. We will integrate the service-learning experience with the course curriculum through such methods as directed readings, reflective writing, and group discussion. Your service-learning is expected to begin by the third week of the course.

The service-learning component of this course is mandatory. Your grade in the course will reflect the fulfillment of your service-learning obligations as well as your integration of your experience with course material. Failure to complete the fieldwork component may result in a failing grade for the course. The service-learning requires that you complete a minimum of 20 hours (approx 2 hours per week) of service with Seven Tepees. While serving at the community based agency, you will be expected to act in a responsible manner. You must keep scheduled work hours and complete assigned duties. You also are expected to maintain good working relationships with supervisors and peers. Conduct that is deemed unacceptable to the agency supervisor may result in you being dismissed from that placement. If this is a problem for you, you must see me as soon as possible.

Process for termination of an service-learning

If at any point during the semester your service-learning experience no longer meets the above criteria, you should approach the instructors immediately to discuss options to improve the situation, and/or terminate the service-learning. If the service-learning experience must be terminated for any reason, the instructors will work with the student to secure a new placement, as soon as possible.

Students should not, under any circumstances, remain in a service-learning organization in which their personal, physical or emotional health is jeopardized or harmed.

Course Requirements

Reflection Papers (2)	100 pts	10%
Social Problem Research Paper	100 pts	10%
Community & Org Assessment	100 pts	10%
Change Proposal	100 pts	10%
Change Project	100 pts	10%
Presentation (2)	150 pts	15%
Portfolio	50 pts	5%
Participation	150pts	15%
Service-learning + Journal	150pts	15%

There are several types of assignments you'll be asked to complete this semester. You cannot successfully complete this course without pursuing all of them.

1. Participation (Attendance, Punctuality and Leading Class Discussion): 150 pts or 15%
Our philosophy of the teaching/learning experience is an interactive one. This is your class. We expect each of you to contribute to this experience by coming to class prepared by having already read the required reading and through active discussion. This requires that you not only read the material, but that you also interact with the reading. In addition, each student will be responsible for leading one class discussion. A handout detailing the requirements will be available on Blackboard.

Obviously one must attend class to participate. Unexcused absences and tardies will result in a reduction of participation points. Arriving to class more than FIVE minutes late will result in an unexcused absence. More than FIVE unexcused absences may result in a failing grade. Students are responsible for all information provided in class. If you have to miss class, we strongly encourage you to borrow notes from one of your classmates.

2. Service-learning (Hours at Site and Journal): 150 pts or 15%

As noted earlier, the service-learning component of this course is mandatory. You must complete a minimum of 20 hours (approx 2 hours per week) of service with Seven Tepees. Your grade in the course will reflect the fulfillment of your service-learning obligations as well as your integration of your experience with course material.

Journal: As part of the service-learning experience you will be expected to keep a journal that will be the cornerstone of your analysis and reflection for the course. Your journal will contain three different kinds of entries: 1) descriptions of social facts and your observations (i.e. the raw data), 2) analyses of your observations, and 3) your reflections based on your observations or analyses. You should plan to set aside time after each visit to your site to make entries in your journal. You will have to develop a pattern that is practical and comfortable for yourself in order to sustain this practice throughout the semester. It is virtually essential that you have access to a word processor for making your journal entries. This is helpful for three reasons: 1) you can jot down rough notes on paper in the field during or immediately after your service work, then create journal entries soon afterwards on the computer (these tend to be more reflective and analytical than stream-of-consciousness hand-written entries, which tend to be more descriptive); 2) you can go back to descriptive entries (and even analytical entries) in your files and insert analytical or reflective entries later, after you have had the chance to think about the issue more or have had other observations with which you can compare them; and 3) the material you enter into the word processor can be extracted and modified quite easily for later incorporation into assigned papers.

Students' service-learning grade will be determined based upon their completed journal, regular, respectful and responsible participation/attendance with community partner, formal and informal evaluation by community supervisor(s), and a self-evaluation at the end of the semester.

3. TBX Presentation: 100 pts or 10%

This presentation is an opportunity for you to share with the Sociology faculty and students as well as the larger USF community your Transborder experience.

4. Change Project Portfolio (600 pts or 60%)

The social action or change project is composed of 8 components and combined accounts for 60% of your final course grade. Students will meet with community members to create an action project that supports local organizing efforts. Projects should be designed to achieve some measurable outcomes by the end of the semester. The Change Project has several key components:

A. Reflection Paper #1: 50 pts or 5%

Over the course of the semester you will write TWO reflection papers. In each paper you must INTEGRATE the readings from the text (and possibly the classroom discussion) with what you are observing, experiencing and learning from your community experience. You must MAKE CONNECTIONS!!! These papers give you an opportunity to reflect on social problems and social change in the hopes that by writing about what you personally are learning, you can come up with new ideas and/or evaluate your own practice. A handout describing the 2-4 page assignments will be posted on Blackboard. Each paper will be graded on a Pass/Fail basis. A passing paper is worth 25 points, a failing paper worth 0 points. To pass, the paper must carefully discuss at least three readings and your service-learning experience. Failing papers may be eligible for revision and resubmission.

B. Empirical Research Paper on Social Problem being addressed by Community Partner: 100 pts or 10%

This 5-7 page paper will address the social problem(s) being addressed by Seven Tepees. Specifically, this empirical paper will identify what is known about the social problem as well as identify and evaluate efforts aimed at ameliorating this problem. A handout describing this assignment will be available on Blackboard.

C. Community Description and Organizational Assessment: 100 pts or 10%

This paper, approximately 5-7 pages in length, provides a history and overview community served by Seven Tepees as well as an overview and history of the organization. A handout describing this assignment will be available on Blackboard.

D. Change Project Proposal: 100 pts of 10%

Based upon the research gathered on your organization, your knowledge of community organizing, and your experiential learning opportunities this semester, your goal is to propose strategy for change in your interest area. This proposal has several key components: Introduction / Problem Statement, Literature Review (Empirical Paper), Needs Assessment, Description of Change Project and Proposed Method of Evaluation. A handout describing this assignment will be available on Blackboard.

E. Change Project: 100 pts or 10%

Each student (or team) must complete their change project by April 30th 2008.

F. Reflection Paper #2: 50 pts or 5%

See description in "A".

G. Presentation: 50 pts or 5%

Each student or team will present their project to the class, EMDS supporters and our community partner.

H. Portfolio: 50 pts or 5%

CLASS POLICIES

Course Evaluation Criteria:

We know that on occasion, it's difficult to figure out what professors expect of you in order to EARN a particular grade. In order to assuage that concern, here is the set of expectations we have of you during this semester; please note that they are not listed in order of importance:

- Be 'in time' and "on time". Consistent attendance in class sessions, with you having read the materials, prepared to discuss the materials, and prepared to pose any questions that you have;
- Attendance in our office hours whenever you have a question or need help in understanding the materials or issues under discussion;
- Professional and respectful service with the community partner;
- Thoughtful reflection on the course materials and issues in your written assignments;
- The diligent pursuit of all assignments, with you committed to doing your best work on each one.

Only a verifiable emergency will be considered as a valid excuse for not turning in an assignment on the assigned date. If an emergency arises and you must turn in an assignment late, you MUST contact us on or before that day by calling our offices. If we are out of the office, be sure to leave a message on the voicemail, including a number where you can be reached. Be sure to keep an extra copy of all assignments in case the copy meant for us gets lost! Late assignments will be penalized! They will be marked down to the next lowest grade (e.g., from A to A-, A- to B+, etc.) for each day past the due date, including non-class days and weekends.

Academic Dishonesty

Although we do not expect anyone to do so, we must remind you that absolutely NO form of academic dishonesty (defined as the use of prohibited materials during an examination and the representation of another's work as your own whether the work was purchased or freely offered) will not be tolerated in this course. Any act of academic dishonesty will be met with an immediate failure on the assignment and handed over immediately to university administration for charges of academic misconduct. We will discuss how to avoid plagiarism; for additional details, see your student handbook.

STORYTELLING TO ENGAGE MULTICULTURALISM (STEM)
A Multicultural Student Services, Health Promotion & Services, and Office of Residential Life Collaboration

The Goal

The goal of the program is to utilize storytelling and the arts as vehicles to help all participants understand the ways in which they experience the world similarly or differently across difference. Storytelling to Engage Multiculturalism (StEM) will focus on viewing the stories and messages by which we are commonly bombarded using a more critical eye. Simultaneously, we will explore the stories and messages we often have limited access to.

A participant who whole-heartedly participates in this program can expect to come away with:

- A greater knowledge of self
- A more developed sense of self efficacy
- Tools or mediums to help express one's own voice
- A greater respect for the experiences and differences of others
- A more developed critical eye as it pertains to history and the daily messages one receives about the world around one's self
- A greater sense of community here at USF

Some of the artistic mediums that may be explored include:

- Painting
- Animation
- Video
- Music
- Theater
- Cartooning
- Photography
- Drawing
- Spoken Word

Group Agreement

Before a student can participate in Storytelling to Engage in Multiculturalism, the student must first commit to the following group agreements:

- 1. Your personal best is the standard. We are not here to recreate the next Saul Williams, Jill Scott, John Leguizamo, Melissa Ethridge, Gloria Anzaldua or Aaron McGruder; we are here to develop ourselves, as artists and thinkers, to the best of our abilities.
- 2. Attendance. A participant may miss a maximum of 2 sessions.

While we will not hand out a grade for this program, we do require effort and commitment from the selected participants so as to respect fellow participants, facilitators, and the applicants who were not selected. Here are the dates to which a participant would need to commit:

Those members present: the right of abstention is not possible. In this case, an abstention has the same effect as a negative vote because the percentage of affirmative votes needed is based on the total number of members present, whether they are voting or abstaining. So, in order to pass the motion, all Active Members present at the meeting must cast affirmative votes by the specified proportion (majority, two-thirds, etc.) of.

The total active membership: the right of abstention is not possible here. In order to pass a motion, affirmative votes must be cast by the specified proportion (majority, two-thirds, etc.) of the entire active membership, whether or not all of the active members are present at the meeting.

Section I:

Each Regular Member Chapter in CFCC shall have one (1) vote. All votes shall be cast by show of hands or upon approval of a secret ballot.

Section II:

The requirement for approval of all actions or decisions by the CFCC requires a simple majority (50%+1) except where a rule in this Constitution specifies otherwise.

Section III:

Executive Board members are non-voting members of CFCC.

Section IV:

In the event of a tie vote, the President of CFCC will cast the tie-breaking vote.

Section V:

If a CFC does not actively participate in CFCC activities/meetings the organization will lose voting and membership rights for that semester.

Vizuri Kabisa History

Through the efforts of the Multicultural Student Services and University Life, and the considerable input of students, the Vizuri Kabisa Awards Ceremony was first celebrated in May 1997 with about 120 students and guests in attendance. Each year the program has grown to an annual attendance of about 400 students, family, and friends who gather at the close of the academic year to celebrate our community. Vizuri Kabisa is Swahili for 'excellence'. Swahili is the most common and accepted language on the African continent. In choosing the name for this event, the thought was to connect with our African heritage while promoting excellence among Africans and African Americans at USF. The ceremony has grown each year and has expanded the recognition awards to include students who exceed academically, student clubs that contribute to the campus, faculty awards, staff awards, recognition of retiring employees, as well as recognizing those who graduate.
