Emergency Resources, Part 1

Emergency Departments

Eli Merritt, M.D.
Merritt Mental Health
San Francisco, CA

A Message from Eli Merritt, M.D.

Let me begin by asking you for your collaboration in this important project. Our mental health system has become, in my opinion, a “non-system” of competing, profit-driven interests and fragmented services. The purpose of this directory and forthcoming directories is to aid health professionals and family members to successfully navigate our challenging system in the vital area of suicide risk.

It is my personal belief that our system does the worst job at its most important treatment functions: suicide risk and addiction. There are many problems specifically related suicide risk: too few doctors and therapists skilled at suicide risk assessment and management; too few acute and subacute facilities available for same-day evaluations and referrals; too few Intensive Outpatient Programs specializing in suicide risk, too many of the few with no openings; too few beds “in-network,” requiring patients to be shipped across the Bay for hospitalization; and too little education of clinicians and the public in how to intervene effectively with individuals at risk.

Nearly every mental health expert I’ve spoken to recently about acute psychiatry services in the Bay Area agrees that the system is in a state of crisis. “It’s grim,” said one acute care psychiatrist at St. Luke’s, alluding to how patients with suicide risk are treated and processed through the system. A CPMC inpatient doctor summed it up, “Need is skyrocketing while services are evaporating.”

These are the conditions that led me to launch the Suicide Risk Project. This volume presents you with the first of three directories: Emergency Departments. Still today, for better or for worse, Emergency Departments are our society’s point of entry for the care of individuals at “imminent risk” of suicide. As you will find in this volume, all departments are not created equal. Look for various associated services that distinguish them:

- * Psychiatric Emergency Services (PES) units
- * Direct admission to hospital’s adult inpatient psychiatric ward
- * Direct admission to hospital’s adolescent inpatient psychiatric ward

Directory #2 will cover other Emergency Resources: Hotlines, mobile crisis services, crisis stabilization units, and inpatient beds. Look for Directory #2 in February.

A Message from Eli Merritt, M.D.

Directory #3 will cover Treatment Programs and Advocacy Groups. Look for that directory in March.

If you know of suicide-related resources in your geographical area, please contact me. I would like to hear from you and to collaborate to make the directories as comprehensive and helpful as possible.

If you find this volume to be useful, please forward it widely to health professionals and family members of individuals at potential risk of suicide.

Happy Holidays.

San Francisco Emergency Departments

Chinese Hospital

This emergency department is a full-service facility providing evaluations for patients of any age. On-site staff perform initial suicide risk assessments. When necessary, the San Francisco Mobile Crisis (adults) or San Francisco Child Crisis (children and adolescents) travels to the hospital to conduct in-depth mental health examinations. Patients of all ages requiring voluntary or involuntary hospitalization are transferred to the nearest appropriate inpatient psychiatric ward. Patients 17 years old and younger are transferred to a hospital with a specialized child and adolescent psychiatric unit. The emergency department provides outpatient referrals to patients released after evaluation.

Regional Medical Center of San Jose

This emergency department is a full-service facility with an on-call psychiatric consult. Patients in need of a suicide risk assessment receive an assessment from an on-call mental health professional. Patients of all ages requiring voluntary or involuntary hospitalization are transferred to the nearest appropriate inpatient psychiatric ward--usually San Jose Emergency Psychiatric Services. Patients 17 years old and younger are transferred to a hospital with a specialized child and adolescent psychiatric unit. Depending on the availability of staff and resources, wait time to be transferred can be several hours. The emergency department provides outpatient referrals to patients released after evaluation.

San Mateo Medical Center

This emergency department is a full-service facility with a specialized on-site Psychiatric Emergency Services unit (PES). Patients in need of a suicide risk assessment bypass the general emergency department. They proceed directly to the separate PES waiting room where a psychiatrist evaluates all patients. Patients deemed to be at risk of suicide may remain voluntarily or involuntarily in the PES for an unlimited amount of time. Patients requiring voluntarily or involuntarily inpatient hospitalization are either admitted to hospital's inpatient psychiatric unit or are transferred to another hospital, depending upon age, availability of beds, and acceptance or nonacceptance of the patients' insurance. Patients 17 years old and younger are not admitted to San Mateo Medical Center's inpatient ward. If hospitalization is required, they are transferred to a hospital with a specialized child and adolescent psychiatric unit. The PES provides outpatient referrals for patients released after evaluation or after a holding period.
